SIGILLUM MUNDI

THE FLESH PROTOCOL

EZEKIEL REDIK YARBROUGH

Sigillum Mundi –
The Flesh
Protocol –
Project
AngelBook –
Volume V – Part 6
by Ezekiel Redik
Yarbrough

This book—and the ones that follow—contain archived material from the internet’s most unpredictable spiritual laboratory: the anonymous imageboard known as 4plebs /x/, the paranormal board of 4chan. These are not my original words, nor do I endorse every claim, image, or belief presented in the raw source. Instead, this series serves as an intellectual and metaphysical preservation effort—a kind of digital archaeology of one of the strangest corners of the collective unconscious.

The material within comes from dozens of anonymous posters, often referred to simply as "Anon" or "OP." These posts appeared on threads buried deep within the /x/ archives, many now deleted or fragmented. They represent a chaotic blend of esotericism, fringe theory, mysticism, paranoia, apocalyptic art, political conspiracy, demonology, alien lore, occult science, and schizophrenic revelation—often in the same paragraph.

Because of the nature of anonymity, the tone of these threads may at times include language, opinions, or attitudes that I do not agree with, including—but not limited to—racist, antisemitic, nihilistic, or inflammatory rhetoric. I’ve preserved the core content for the sake of historical transparency and symbolic decoding, not to promote any of it.

Wherever possible, I’ve restructured or contextualized the more dangerous or damaging claims through analysis, reframing, and mythic synthesis.

These books should be read as a living archive, not as a manifesto. I am not the author of the original posts, but the decoder, compiler, and mythic translator. Much of the source material is full of errors, contradictions, or symbolic overload—and that’s part of what makes it meaningful. This is chaos magick in digital form, a kind of spiritual static emerging through the cracks of the simulation.

As you read, remember:

This is not truth—it is signal.

This is not my belief system—it is an archive.

This is not doctrine—it is a window into a spiritual fever dream.

What you are about to enter is not safe, clean, or spiritually resolved. It is raw transmission—a shattered cathedral of glyphs and parasites, alien ghosts and inverted gods, psychic antennas and glitching sigils. If you have the strength to look clearly, you may find buried beneath the madness a kind of broken truth, still echoing.

I did not write this.

But I preserved it—so we could decode it together.

LEVITATION

The ability to levitate, to defy the law of gravity and rise unaided into the air, is a rare, but well-documented paranormal ability that is usually (but not universally) attributed to the saints. St Francis of Assisi was often discovered to have risen in his religious ecstasy to the height of a beech tree. On at least one occasion a visiting monk "beheld him lifted up in the air so high, and surrounded with such splendour, that he scarce could see him'. That most practical medieval saint, Teresa of

Character, possibilities:

These people are ambitious and have a desire for power and money. Risky journeys will bring them success. The problem is sometimes a lack of courage, endurance and mental balance. They have good management and organizational skills. They are tough and persistent, but also conservative, It is important for them to understand how to maintain balance in life. They need to understand causes and consequences. It is important to keep in balance giving and receiving; material property will not bring peace or satisfaction if it does not benefit others. They have a strong character and determination to overcome obstacles.

Weaknesses, what should be learned:

These people have to be careful not to abuse their power because it can have serious negative consequences. It is good if they learn to wait for their success, otherwise there is a risk of many failures; aggression; toughness; intolerance and impatience. They should not lose a sense of decency and respect for others otherwise there can be financial or legal problems. They think highly of themselves and they are picky and moody.

Accidents or health problems may slow down their development,

Birthday Number - 26th - Assertiveness

Character, possibilities:

These people are sensitive, kind and understanding. They have a great inner strength to overcome difficulties. They have organizational and leadership skills. They have a very good judgement and they will notice everything. They are quick-witted and they are able to do anything.

They are bright and they are able to do anything. They are independent, ambitious and generous. They separate their personal life from their work. They are hardworking, tenacious and successful. They will achieve success and high social status later in life. They want emotional security. They are gentle and they have a good heart. They are generous and they support others. They like to solve other people's problems. They are diplomatic and they are able to inspire others. They are responsive, open and accessible. They can work very hard to achieve success, Their relationships and career are important to them,

They will reach recognition or even fame.

Weaknesses, what should be learned:

These people need others to show interest in them. They are insecure and sometimes dependent on others. They take everything very seriously; they are too eager and obsessed with their feelings. They have problems in their romantic relationships so it is very important

ta choose a partner very carefully. They are greedy, arrogant and they overestimate themselves. It is necessary to maintain a balance. They are cruel, revengeful, hypersensitive, moody and aggressive. They hate those who hurt them. They pester other people. They are especially intolerable in managerial positions. Beware of pride and emotional tension.

Vibrations of numbers three bring mental activity and generate the need to release energy through social contacts, studying and various hobbies, Communication, with an emphasis on self-expression in all areas, becomes more important this year. If mental energy is not correctly directed, people may become: irritable and critical, or they may begin to suffer from bad dreams or insomnia.

It is not a year for routine, everyday activities. This year, people start ta be mare imaginative and all activities must be challenging and stimulating in order to make full use of mental energy that is available.

This year, people may be forced to deal with the past, with various unresolved relationships and situations. It is almost unbelievable how often people in this personal year meet with relatives or ex-lovers who they have not seen for long periods of time, and try to solve buried problems that they did not want-to think about until this time. It is natural that when people try to overcome their problems with rational communication, emotional trauma of the situation disappears. This time is also best suited for studying because mental energy is peaking.

Here is proof arthropods did this a long time ago
"You take its anatomy, code it into a data set and then run probabilistic methods on it, which will tell you how likely it is that something evolved in a particular way," he explained.
This process suggested that Aquilonifer spinosus ("aquilo" means north wind or kite and the "-fer" suffix means carry) was a mandibulate: it belongs to the same broad group as modern insects, crustaceans and centipedes - but is not a direct ancestor.

'Nothing is known today that attaches the young by threads to its upper surface," said co-author Derek Briggs, from Yale University in the US.

'Modern crustaceans employ a variety of strategies to protect their eggs and embryos from predators - attaching them to the limbs, holding them under the Carapace, or enclosing them within a special pouch until they are old enough to be released - but this example is unique.

'It shows that arthropods evolved a variety of brooding strategies beyond those around today - perhaps this strategy was less successful and became extinct."

You all need to understand that this is where we are at in the timeline.
Millions of people have been injected with the eggs of this parasite.

The Devil's hands have been busy and the organism has been miniaturized and chimera'd with the genes of a Rhizocephala by stealth this time around.

to help it spread inside the body

These tendrils will eventually hatch egas

The parasite found in the vax by doctors all over the world was not an accidental contamination,

it is the entire point of the vaxx. It is paired with nanotechnology to take over the host. This is why there was so much backlash against using Ivermectin to protect yourself from Covid.

Ivermectin is an anti-parasitic and would prevent these eggs from surviving inside you once injected

This is the most famous example of a Rhizocephela. It is called a Sacculina.

Look at how it starts off as an embryo, it attaches inside the host's blood stream, then proceeds to extend tendrils in every direction and penetrates every single part of the host's body. Many Rhizocephela extend into the brain and can influence the host's behavior by interacting directly with the neurons at the cellular level.

*Although it's never publicly admitted, multiple sources allege Murdoch has Jewish ancestry on his maternal line. He's also a devoted Zionist who's been honored by the Simon Wiesenthal Center, the Anti-Defamation League and the American Jewish Committee. In the Algemeiner Journal's annual list of the top 10 non-Jews that are positively influencing the Jewish future, Murdoch has consistently ranked near the top.

About 20% of US taxpayer funded NPR's personnel are of Jewish descent.
As merely 2% of the United States population, why are dual American & Israeli Jewish citizens allowed to represent about 1/5 of the US taxpayer subsidized public radio station?

_) Anonymous (ID: @QUIEZ7G53) Bl 09/16/18(Sun)13:18:38 No.185881672 >
This is the thread with the anon claiming to seen the future in his dream
<https://archive.4plebs.org/x/thread/18298820/#q18302615>

>marked post is his first post

Zzill

He goes into detail, make sure to read it all.

Points of interest:

>Symbolism; zoroastrian dakhmas

>zoroastrian: first religion

>used winged symbolism

Hi

>eagel, annunaki, etc

Here is the thread with anon claiming to be an ayyy (ID: immJCv6Q)

<https://archive.4plebs.org/pol/thread/92393605/#q92427072>

>marked post of Ur ans Saahid

He is very straight forward and actually based

Points of interest:

>Ur, first name of evil ayyy >letter from the angel language >developed by john dee, used by Aleister crowley to summon demons >demons look like greys (without a suite/ skin?)

© CanStoc'Photo.com - cs057027468

sidenote:

We actually should be in a timeline where clinton had won, consider the following, with clinton as president - the deep state had success with all the fake news

we see right now (civil war, war with russia) now take a second look at the dream of anon from 2016

sidenote2:

what actually happened in 2016?

Meme war, trump, cern, timeshift

sidenote3:

Deep state (satanic cabal) use a lot of the symbolism/ eagel/ wings since the very first religion pops up.

>german eagle

>hitler eagle

>annunaki eagle

>ekypt eagle

all of those and more have one thing in common, search it up

If you killed yourself to escape, it wouldn't work, they could reanimate the dead and keep you on some sort of life support for the sake of experimentation, I don't know why or how but somehow I knew that if they took you that you were theirs forever, there was no escape.

However the ones who wore people's skin had these large pools ringed with symbols that looked similar to Zoroastrian dakhmas (I don't know the spelling) and they would fill these pools with the people's liquefied remains and bathe in them, and their children would bathe in them and drink them, and they would try throwing people in and if you fell in

Skin walkers are purely evil in intent. I'm no expert on it, but the general view is that skinwalkers do all sorts of terrible things --they make people sick, they commit murders.

Today's Sumerian word of the day is "ur", a lozogram whose basic meaning is "dos". However, "ur" was really a classification of a group of animals - a group that seems to be defined as something like "large carnivores with square muzzles". (Of course, when we're talking about dogs in ancient Mesopotamia, we're not talking about happy friendly golden retriever type dogs - we're mostly talking about very large, half-wild, bull-mastift kinds of dogs. The Kind who licked Jezebel's blood up in the city square in the Bible.) In Tact, dogs as portrayed on Assyrian reliefs look quite similar to lions - which is why the logogram for lion is "ur-mah", which literally means "big dog" ("mah" means big or great). Another common use of "ur" on Sumerian royal inscriptions is in the expression "ur-sag", which literally means "top dog", and which is usually translated "warrior" or "hero". Ur looks like this:

It's pronounced "oor", more or less.

Im not sure what they looked like. they were always wearing human skin when saw them, although it was sort of loose and they would walk upright like humans, but they could run faster than any human, and even faster on all 4's, even the child sized ones were stronger than any human, there was no way to kill any of them either, 1 dant mean that figuratively, | mean literally in my entire time | had not seen a single one die.

The first event | had was when | was a kiddo, although i didn't realize it until | was older, but my parents and schoolteachers did.

Before 9/11 i was always (ALWAYS) drawing cities, and would put the twin towers in them burning, although | was like 4 at the time and | had never even seen them or heard-of them, i did this in my agenda notebook, on the desk, on paper at home, all the time, nobody thought anything of it until 9/11 happened and then everyone was very quiet around me. they would try to be really nice to me. they wanted me to draw something other than bumng towers, they never told me what, they just told me to draw whatever i wanted, don't really remember much beyond that though.

Fast forward about a decade and a half. i find my old agenda notebooks in the closet. and see 9/11 scribbles all over them from time periods far before 9/11, 1 finally went and asked my parents about it and they were extremely squirmy on the subject, but finally they had told me that i was drawing all of this before 9/11 and that they were hoping i would just forget, they had told me that my mother apparently predicted a bunch of plane crashes between the 60's and the 60's to excruciating detail (down to the exact locations they would hit) although she lost this ability when | was born.

They had a weird sort of glow to them though, like you could see under the skin where they had glowing machinery or augmented body parts or something that were part of them, and some of them the heads didn't look right because you could see the human's skin on them but you could see 4 or 5 glowing white eyes under the skin the only way to survive was either run, which wasn't advisable because they WILL catch you on foot, or hide until they leave. but even that wasn't too good because they were extremely quiet and would just sit there and wait outside of doors silently until people open them and then they would take them, the only people who really survived were the ones who had already gotten to the middle of nowhere when the nuclear war went down, or those who had basically given away their own as bait to lure them away while they escaped. I would not doubt for a second that by the end of the 72 years there were probably only a few hundred thousand people left on earth, if even that many.

Apparently my grandmother and my great grandmother had the same ability to varying other degrees, it's really made me question a lot of shit ever since though, to the extent that I seriously worry about my own thoughts.

My scanner isn't working so I can't upload anything I've drawn about this stuff without it being shit-tier quality but from what I can tell, their technology is compartmentalized, as in they have several tiers/hierarchies of technology, whether this is due to them being an amalgam of civilizations or not is unknown to me, but I think it might be a similar reason to just not wanting us to get their technology, I'm pretty sure the hand scanner was theirs, but I was based off existing human technology, or maybe human technology was based off of it? I'm not sure.

Significantly after this, but before re-discovering this weird life event of mine, I had another incident take place.

Most of their other stuff was absolutely useless to us though, there was no way for us to use it, somehow with these portals being open they were siphoning some kind of energy that powered the ships completely different from electricity, although I'm not sure they even needed the portals tbh.

it was very basic too, none of that H.R. geiger alien style, the ships were very utilitarian in design on the inside, everything served a purpose and only that purpose, no decoration whatsoever.

However they also had large facilities on the earth, they looked like normal warehouses but the ones who wore people's skin were inside these, they would liquefy humans in here and keep them in devices that looked similar to dryers, and each liquified human was kept in their own, and we had a hand scanner we could use to find where our person's remains were so we could steal them so that they couldn't re-constitute their remains and make them suffer, somehow we could reconstruct the entire person back to what they were with this liquid.

However the ones who wore people's skin had these large pools lined with symbols that looked similar to zoroastrian dakhmas (i don't know the spelling) and they would fill these pools with the people's liquefied remains and bathe in them, and their children would bathe in them and drink them, and they would try throwing people in and if you fell in then you were one of them.

In addition to all of this, i say Mexican uprising, what| mean is that the Mexico aligned with Russia and most of south America/central America, so this coupled with Russia allowed for a fairly robust invasion, the U.S. had been weakened substantially already as i said due to the internal civil war, whether it is related to this election or not though I'm not sure, under normal circumstances i doubt they would be able to pull off an invasion though so we must've been fairly weakened, i know the white house and the capitol was taken by the people's revolutionary force (shit name but that's what they called themselves or had grown to be called anyways), so for the most part the government had already been decapitated before the invasion.

| then remember her whispering to me very quietly, "we need to be quiet and turn all the lights off or theyll see us", we did this, and saw lights on the honzon slowly blinking out one by one by one. i dont know if the lights were really clase enough or nat, but i could swear i heard distant screaming, like there was.a

reason their lights were going off, as though even in our victory we were still being hunted, i do not know what our enemy was, we all just called it "Them" In addition to all of this (Again) the invasion and subsequent nuclear exchange had all come about very quickly, | was out in the back yard with my mother putting white christmas lights in the backyard as patio lights, | don't think it was near chnstmas though.

| woke up after this, and realized i had been asleep for almost 14 hours, (normally i sleep7 and a half) and that this 72 years of mine had all somehow been a complex fabrication of my imagination.

However, every single event leading upto this has happened so far again, every single last one, and | fear that either i am once again in the lang dream, or that it has become reality this time, and we are about to see tribulation.

we had literally walked inside and my dad was laying on the floor watching tv and had said "well i guess we just started world war 3" and not 20 seconds after that the first flash went off outside near what would probably be the Pasadena area of Houston, followed by the large area of petra-chemical plants on the other side of the ship channel, they looked to be fairly low yield (10-20kt range) as though they were specifically trying to target smaller areas but i don't know, we got the shockwave where i was and our windows were blown out but the building was-still in tact with little damage.

All of this sounds ridiculous to believe whatsoever i know, | still have 2 other stories about similar events to this if youre interested.

| don't know how even a breakaway civilization could fight them though, fram my understanding they were possibly the first intelligent species ever throughout all dimensions, or one of the first anyways, | can't imagine anyone from this planet could even fathom a way to fight them, it would've had to have been someone else out there on their technological level.

| had never said they were glowing green under their skin, i-don't think i did, they were glowing the same as their ships as a sort of white/yellowy-blue-ish color, i don't have a word for it but it wasn't an earth color, i speculate on the machinery but there were bits and pieces poking out through the skin and holes in the skin due to some people's skin going necrotic, the machinery under the skin logked like a very similar stone gray as their ships, the skin was pretty contorted on their bodies in some cases though (as i said multiple eyes covered by the skin sometimes) or others where the skin didn't exactly fit them right, they still had mouths though but i don't think it was for eating, i think perhaps it helped them grab onto people or for the express purpose of killing or subduing them, i don't even know if they were technically alive or if they themselves were just biological machines, some of them really seemed like they wanted the skin as trophies more than anything though, they collected it and some of them were wearing multiple layers, and as | said | have no idea whatsoever as to why they would liquefy the people and put them in the dryer machines in the warehouses, surely they had some purpose but i don't know, tt could just be as simple as storage or perhaps some religious purpose of theirs, they seemed to have some interest in Zoroastrianism as i said.

The next things to come along are that the rest of the middle east falls apart. not just what we're already seeing but jordan, lebanon, saudi arabia, iran, pretty much everything except israel. eventually a space station (no idea which one or when/how) will de-orbit, a war between Russia and the U.S. is going to kick off, t's inevitable, Russia ts going to invade up through Mexice, the red line is how far into the U.S_ they end up advancing due to aid from the native Mexican population initiating an insurrection due to increased nationalism, and a weak quasi-breakup of the U_S. following a civil war the green circle is a flashpoint where Russia didnt invade at first, they stayed on one side of the ship channel until finally attempting to cross it and that's when things go nuclear, 36 nuclear weapons are exchanged in and around the green circle, i have no idea how many are exchanged elsewhere as that is the last time we have internet or TV ever again, many other electronic devices and vehicles still worked however, mostly older ones though and for some reason as | said the hand held scanner for finding humans worked.

Russia does a few more strikes with aircraft that | assume were hardened against the initial nuclear exchange, although they very quickly stopped as | imagine they likely ran out of fuel or somesuch other reason, very soon after this is when the ships arrived.

>> 18302922

The ship in that video looks nothing like their ships, sorry, they didn't have digital displays like that, it was kind of like some strange form of hardlight farmed out of energy or something, but it had solid pieces that tt looked like if the hardlight turned of then they would fall to the flaor but they didn't, they sat there in a static position, the ship had no windows whatsoever either, and any writing anywhere was in the same light/energy as the consoles, the best i can describe it is that the ship was as much an amalgam ofa mash of technologies as one can imagine, there was stuff that just simply looked out of place for something like that, rudimentary tools along with energy, along with patchwork on the inside of the ships as though they were extremely old. but at the same time they looked like they were made of metal and stone at the same time if that makes any sense.

| used to work in the plants and they could actually surave a low-yield blast fairly well (as they're built to sunmve the explosions of nearby units/plants already.) you might have to rebuild the control room and change butterfly valves and anything else with an electronic sensor but most of the stuff out there that could be that sensitive is buried, my guess is it could only take about a month or 2 to get it back online (assuming you had workers and assuming the plant itself wasn't hit too close)

That's pretty similar yeah except they don't drool, although it's possible what you said that they're controlled by them as scouts then, perhaps some kind of brain implant or some such other similar machination, so I wouldn't doubt it.

This is my best paintshop rendition of it but it doesn't do it justice whatsoever, the things were massive and intimidating, like just up there in the sky solid and un-moving, never once did we see one move, and most of the time you only see like half of it, the other half is usually obscured by fog.

I can't make it look like it in paint but the surface is pretty much completely seamless but it can open up, the inside looks like a mix of the metallic stone and the energy when it does, I never saw anything come out though but they would leave these things that looked like giant stone caskets on the ground below the holes in the ships and the things would crawl out of them.

Connection between Heather and/or Beato O'rourke and the Minneapolis Riots?

A thread about Freemasonry was just deleted seconds after it was discovered that the porn video that George Floyd was in had "heather orourke" in the title. Someone said if you wanted to find the original George Floyd porn video you had to go to x videos and search for
"Kimberly brink heather o rouke" and look for the video published by "The HabibShow". It turns out that's true, that is how you find the video.

It was revealed in this thread >>260476720 <https://archive.is/ZG4du> that George Floyd and Officer Chauvin worked together in a Masonic building at a bar called El! Nuevo Rodeo. The owner of that bar was Maya Santamaria, who also owned Telemundo Minnesota, where she has a contract with the Minnesota twins to broadcast baseball games.
This connects her to the Pohlad, the owners of the Twins and other shady business enterprises, including an election rigging app and ripping off the pentagon. They donated large sums of money to Hillary Clinton and were behind Pete Buttigieg. They also own movie studios.
It turns out the owner of the Minnesota Twins' wife is Eloise
O'Rourke Pohlad

>Eloise O'Rourke Pohlad was the youngest of 10 children. She attended Mundelein College in Chicago for two years, studying home economics. She worked for several years as a receptionist, teller and bookkeeper for a Dubuque bank before meeting Carl Pohlad, whom she married April 22, 1947.

>George Floyd and Officer Chauvin worked together in a Masonic building

This building has been associated with porn for a long time. It used to house Eklunds clothing for decades, where porn was sold outside at a news stand owned by Ferris Alexander who later turned the entire building into a gay bar before being convicted on RICO charges.

Remember this guy, Anthony Codes-EKLUND who agitated against both sides by going on the biggest livestream and telling everyone that police instigators he described as "literal agents" were trying to get him to break into buildings that were all later burned down?

>Eklund "Fears for his life" and smears the police:

<https://youtu.be/G3heuPIqkB8>

>Eklund smears protestors and incites a riot:

<https://youtu.be/yqLWFjp5U>

It turns out his family are connected to the Order of Odd Fellows, the Masonic group that constructed this building.

>Odd Fellow Building housed Eklund Clothing before being converted to a porn studio:

<https://archive.is/mQw81>

>Eklund clothing founder Nels Person Eklund was a member of the Odd Fellows

<https://books.google.com/books?id=EXZKAAAAYAAJ&pg=PA648&lpg=PA648&dg=%22person+eklund%22&source=bl&ots=29eRyKwm1M&sig=ACfU3SU3M3CBV33pQ2euDCyz1 winKkcr-izw&hl=en&sa=X&ved=2ahUKEwillsXM1 OfpAhUcJZQIHVz8DR8Q6AEWAHoECAKQAQ#Vv=onepage&q=%22person%20eklund%22&f=false>

>Fredrik Eklund from porn to real estate

<https://www.nytimes.com/2010/11/14/fashion/14eklund.html>

Given the connections to porn, the media, and real estate, it might be significant that Spielberg's daughter is now a porn actress.

Sup /x. | was debating if| should post this story, but after a few weeks of nothing happening, | decided to-say fuck it and post it. So first, some context. | work-as a ranger in the Bargunzinsky state natural reservoir near the lake Baikal. Over the past years I've come to find out that lake Baikal is a very fucked place. So here's a few of my experiences

Il-start off with a few oddities

Aside from the usual ice rings, Baikal zen; vehicles/animals/people stuck in ice, there are oddities like unknown ships appearing on foggy days: | remember spetting-a few unidentified ships in my time and [ve heard stories of really old looking ships appearing in the fog. Another creepy thing that happens is dead animals washing up. Now that's nothing out of the ordinary, but some of the animals wash up completely hallow. Anything from fish to birds to even seals. Speaking of washed up animals, sometimes people stumble across the corpse of a golomyanka. Pic is what the fish looks like so you can't blame people for being scared shitless when they see one.

So onto the intresting greentext worthy stuff

The Finders

During the execution of the warrant at 3918/7270 W St., I was able to observe and access the entire building. I saw large quantities of children's clothes and toys. There were diapers, as well as clothing in the toddler to pre-school range. No children were found on the premises. There were several subjects on the premises. Only one was deemed to be connected to the Finders. The rest were renting living space from this individual. He was identified as Stuart Miles SILVERSTONE, D.O.B. 06/19/41, US. Passport No. 010958991. Mr. SILVERSTONE was located in a room equipped with several computers, printers, and numerous documents. cursory examination of the documents revealed detailed instructions for obtaining children for unspecified purposes. The instructions included the impregnation of female members of the community known as Finders, purchasing children, trading, and kidnapping. There were telex (7) messages using HCI account numbers between a computer terminal believed to be located in the same room, and others located across the country and in foreign locations.

One such telex specifically ordered the purchase of two children in Hong Kong to be arranged through contact in the Chinese Embassy there. Another telex expressed an interest in "bank secrecy" situations. Other documents identified interest in high-tech transfers to the United Kingdom, numerous properties under the control of the Finders, a keen interest in terrorism, explosives, and the evasion of law enforcement. Also found in the "computer room" was a detailed summary of the events surrounding the arrest and taking into custody of the two adults and six children in Tallahassee, Florida on the previous night. There was also a set of instructions which appears to be broadcast via computer network which advised participants to move "the children" and keep them moving through different jurisdictions, and instructions on how to avoid police attention.

One of the residents was identified as a Chinese National. Due to the telex discovered referencing the Chinese Embassy in Hong Kong, he was fully identified for future reference: WANG

Gengxin, D.O.B. 09/27/47, P.O.B. Tianjin, People's Republic of China, Passport No. 324999, entered the U.S. on January 22, 1987, admitted until December 31, 1987. He is in the U.S. as a graduate student in the Anatomy Department of Georgetown University. His visa was issued on November 10, 1986, in London, England, number 00143.

On Thursday, Febmuary 5, 1987, this office was contacted via telephone, by sergeant, JoAnn VanMETER. of the Tallahassee Police Department, Juvenile Division. Set. VanMETER requested assistance in identifying two adult males and sim mmor children ages J years to 2 years.

was made by Region. No positive matches were obtained from the CPPU data base. I was later joined at the W Street address by 55/A Harrold. $5/A Harrold advised me that there were extremely large quantities of documents and computer equipment at the warehouse, and that HPD was posting officers inside the building there and sealing the building until morning, in which a second warrant for that premises would be obtained and executed. 55/A Harrold also advised me that the news media had been notified and had been waiting for the execution of the warrant at the 4th Street address... Detective Bradley later stated that the MPD Public Information Officer had been contacted by a Tallahassee reporter. When it became apparent that FIO had no information on the search warrants, the reporter contacted local media representatives and a check of public records containing the affidavits for the search warrants disclosed the locations and purpose of the warrants. Detective Bradley surmised that someone on the Tallahassee Police Department was the original source of information for this press_ | advised 55/A Holloran of the involvement of the

The adult males were tentatively identified by TPD as Michael HOULTHAN and Douglas AMDMERMIAN, both of Washington, D.C. who were arrested the previous day on charges of child abuse.

The police had received an anonymous telephone call (relating to) two well-dressed white men wearing suits and ties in Myers Park. (Tallahassee), apparently watching six dirty and unkempt children in the playground area. HOULTHAN and AMMMERMAN were near a 1980 Blue Dodge van bearing Virginia license number XHW-5357, the inside of which was later described as foul-smelling, filled with maps, books letters, and with a assisted in the transport of the evidence seized pursuant to the warrant and cleared MPD after the press left the area.

The children were covered in insect bites, were very dirty, most of the children were not wearing underwear, and all the children had not been bathed in many days.

On Friday, 2/6/87, | met Detective Bradley at the warehouse on 4th Street, N_E..I duly advised my acting group supervisor, 55,/A Don Bludworth: I was again granted unlimited access to the premises. | was able to observe numerous documents which described explicit sexual conduct between the member of the community known as Finders. I also saw a large collection of photographs of unidentified persons. Some of the photographs were nudes, believed to be

The men were arrested and charged with multiple counts of child abuse and lodged in the Leon County Jail. Once in custody, the men were somewhat evasive in their answers to the police regarding the children and stated only that they were both the children's teachers. and that (they all) were enroute to Mexico to establish a school for brilliant children.

members of the Finders. There were numerous photos of children, some nude, at least one of which was a photo of a child "on display", and appearing to accent the child's genitals. I was only able to examine a very small amount of the photos at this time. However, one of the officers presented me with a photo album for my review. The album contained a series of photos of adults and children dressed in white sheets participating in a "blood ritual". The ritual centered around the execution, disembowelment, skinning and then dismemberment of goats at the hands of various children. This included the removal of the testicles of the male goat, the discovery of the female goats' wombs, and the 'baby goats' inside the wombs, as well as the presentation of a goat's head to one of the children.

The children tentatively were identified as follows:

Mary HOULTAN, white female age 7;
Max LIVINGSTON, white male, age 6;

Benjamin FRANELIN, white male age 4;
HoneyBee EVANS, white female, age 3;
BB. white male. age 2:
John Paul HOULTAN, white male. age 2.

Further inspection of the premises disclosed numerous files relating to the activities of the organization in different parts of the world. Locations I observed are as follows: London, Germany, the Bahamas, Japan, Hong Kong, Malaysia, Africa, Costa Rica, and Europe. There was also a file identified as 'Palestinian'. All the other files were identified by a member name or 'project' name, the projects appearing to show fronts being operated by the Finders. There was one file entitled 'Pentagon Break-In', and others which referred to members operating in foreign countries. Not observed by me, but relayed by an MPD officer, were intelligence files on private families who weren't related to the Finders. The process undertaken appears to have been a systematic response to local newspaper advertisements for babysitters, tutors, etc. A member of the Finders would respond (to those ads), and gather as much information as possible about the

The children initially indicated that they lived in tents in a commune in the Washington D.C. area, and were going to Mexico to go to a school for smart lads. This office contacted the Office of the RAC/DC and spoke with $5/A, Bob Harrold. This agent requested telephone numbers and names of police persons in area departments that might be aware of said activities described by the children and to follow-up on the leads; the Virginia license number, and a check on the men's names with local law enforcement.

habits, identity, occupation, etc., of the family. The usage of this information is still unknown.

There was also a large amount of data collected on various child care organizations.

A short time later. this office was contacted by Detective, Jim Bradley of the Washington D.C. Metropolitan Police Department. Bradley indicated that the case here in Tallahassee appeared to be strongly related to a case he was currently working on in the Washington D.C. area.

The warehouse contained a large library, two kitchens, a sauna, hot-tub, and a "video room'. The video room seemed to be set up as an indoctrination center. It also appeared that the organization had the capability to produce its own videos. There were what appeared to be training areas for children, and what appeared to be an altar set up in a residential area of the warehouse. Many jars of urine and feces were located in this area.

He stated that the actions of the two men in custody in Tallahassee, along with the children, must give his case enough probable cause for search warrants to search premises occupied by a cult group called the FINDERS. This agent directed Bradley to telephone TPD and discuss with police directly any activities forthcoming relating to the case. At this time, it was determined that there was no Custom violations found to exist, and therefore, this case is being closed pending receipt of additional information. ACTION TO BE TAKEN BY LESD/TECS: Create a permanent DDR/TECS record. IDENTIFYING DATA/TECS-FIN QUERIES:

I should also mention that both premises were equipped with satellite dish antennas. I discussed the course of action to be taken by HPD (?) by Detective Bradley. MEMO TO FILE

SUBJECT:

Customs cooperation/interest in Tallahassee Washington HPD child abuse investigation.

On April 2, 1987, I arrived at MPD at approximately 9.00 am. Detective Bradley was not available. |

02/07/87

On Thursday, 2/5/87, the duty agent 55/A Eob Harrold, received a call from 55/A Walter Krietlow, USCS, Tallahassee, Florida, 55/A Krietlow was seeking assistance in contacting an appropriate local police agency to coordinate a child abuse investigation with the Tallahassee Police Department. 55/A Krietlow further requested assistance in checking some names, addresses, and a vehicle through the Customs Child Pornography Unit data base, and stated there was some suspicion of the subjects being involved in supplying children for the production of child pornography. Further, he was informed by the Tallahassee Police Department that the children may have been enroute to Mexico from the Washington D.C. area. The possibility of Customs interest in the investigation due to possible violations of the Child Protection Act of 1984, and the alleged nexus with the U.S./Mexican Border were discussed and agreed upon. 55/A Krietlow related the following background information:

"SS/A Krietlow was contacted by the Tallahassee Police Department for assistance in identifying six children and two adults taken into custody in the Tallahassee area. U.S. Customs was contacted because the police officers involved suspected the adults of being involved in child pornography, and knew the Customs Service to have a network of child pornography investigators, and of the existence of the Child Pornography and Protection Unit. SSA Krietlow stated the two adults were well dressed white males. They had custody of six white children (boys and girls), ages three to six years. The children were observed to be poorly dressed, bruised, dirty, and behaving like animals in a public park in Tallahassee. The police were notified by a concerned citizen, and all eight persons were taken into custody. The suspects were living out of a white 1979 Dodge Van, Virginia license no. XHW 557.

Upon being taken into custody, the adult white males refused to cooperate, one of whom produced a 'business' card with a name on one side, and a statement on the other. The statement indicated that the bearer knew his constitutional rights to remain silent, and that he intended to do so. Upon interviewing the children, the police officers found that they could not adequately identify themselves, nor their custodians. Further, they stated that they were enroute to Mexico to attend a 'school for smart kids'. SSA Krietlow was further advised the children were unaware of the function and purpose of telephones, televisions, and toilets, and also that the children had stated they were not allowed to live indoors and were only given food as a reward."

spoke to a third party who was willing to discuss the case with me on a strictly "off the record" basis.

I was advised that all the passport data had been turned over to the State Department for their investigation. The State Department in turn, advised MPD that all travel and use of the passports by the holders of the passports was within the law, and no action would be taken. This included travel to Moscow, North Korea, and North Vietnam from the late 1950's to mid 1970's. The individual further advised me of circumstances which indicated that the investigation into the activity of the Finders had become a CIA internal matter. The MPD report has been classified as secret and was not available for review. I was advised that the FBI had withdrawn from the investigation several weeks prior, and that the FBI Foreign Counter Intelligence Division had directed MPD not to advise the FBI Washington Field of anything that had transpired. No further information will be made available. No further action will be taken.

ACTION TO BE TAKEN BY LESD/TECS:

No action to be taken on the basis of this report.

"FINDERS"
(CF-22338 ettached)

After recieving the request from Tallahassee, 55/,A Harrold contacted me while | was on official business at Customs Headquarters. He requested that I conduct computer checks on the Customs Child Pornography Unit data base. The checks were to be conducted on the names, addresses, and vehicle number provided by 55/A Krietlow. After conducting the computer checks, | made direct contact with 55/A

Krietlow to inform him that all the checks were negative.

At that time, I was informed by 55,/A Krietlow that the Tallahassee police had discovered large quantities of records, to include computer discs and a U.S. passport in the van. From some of these records the police had obtained tentative identification of the two adults, and partial identification of the children. Furthermore, the two Washington D.C. addresses had been discovered through these documents, one of which was verified through the vehicle registration. | advised 55/4 Krietlow I was leaving Headquarters and he would be receiving a response to the remainder of his request from 5$/A Harrold. I then left as stated and proceeded to conduct other business in the District.

A short time later, at approximately 11:30 am, 55,4 Harrold contacted me by radio, and advised me that a Detective Jim Bradley of the Washington D.C. Metropolitan Police Department (MPD) was interested in the information provided by 55/A Krietlow, was in contact with Tallahassee, and would very likely be conducting search warrants in the area later in the day. He also informed me that U.S. Customs was invited to participate due to the continuing possibility of violations of law enforced by the Customs Service. As | was already in Washington, I terminated my other business and proceeded to make contact with Detective Bradley, Intelligence Division, MPD.

Upon contacting Detective Bradley, I learned that he had initiated an investigation on the two addresses provided by the Tallahassee Police Dept. during December of 1985. An informant had given him information regarding a cult, known as the "Finders" operating various businesses out of a warehouse located at 1307 4th St,

N.E., and were supposed to be housing children at 3918/3920 W St., N.W. The informant was specific in describing "blood rituals" and sexual orgies involving children, and an as-of-yet unsolved murder in which the Finders may be involved. With the information provided by the informant, Detective Bradley was able to match some of the children in Tallahassee with names of the children known alleged to be in the custody of the Finders. Furthermore, Bradley was able to match the tentative ID of the adults with known members of the Finders_I stood by while Bradley consulted with AHSA (?) Harry Bonner and obtained search warrants for the two premises. I advised acting RAC 55/A Tim Holloran of my intention to accompany MPD on the execution of the warrants, received his permission, and was joined by $5,/'A Harrold. $5/A Harrold accompanied the team which went to 1307 4th St, and I went to 3918/20 W 5t.

SUMMARY:

A large group of people performing rituals, sacrifices, group sex, and more things, with documents including how to make bombs, avoid police detection, 'acquire' children from various means, and so on, is discovered by police detectives.

This investigation is then immediately made secret/terminated, and is classified as a

CIA internal matter. According to this document, the CIA is/was either complicit or outright funding this group.

fucking course, lead all the way to that borehole. We got out of there very fast after that, but as we were packing that drone shit started again from that hole, and it

Anyway, the site we went to survey was fairly typical of what you expect in the industry at these sorts of locations (thin topsoil giving way to permeable siltstone), excellent locations for surveying.

Now to the story. We came to a location where satellite was loud. It was guttural by this point, whatever the shit was making it was down there and close too.

German guy went pretty nuts after that. Just hopped in, imagery was suggesting that permafrost was retreating. It the next 14 hours.

I pretty much ditched my job soon after, I had no desire to still fucking snows and ices over, of course, but the key point is that it's not entirely frozen over. You can install stuff during the summer months, get gas production up. It was a pretty boring landscape though, very thin topsoil giving way rapidly to permeable siltstone. Lots of these natural holes all over the place too, permafrost plugs that had melted and left 20 to 30 m deep holes dotted all over the place.

We decided to stay a few weeks and do some test surveys. First week was completely fine, got some good locations, things progressing smoothly, By the end of that week though, things were getting a little weird. Every time I would go out with the spectrometer after that first week,

I'd occasionally hear some noises from the holes. I was never near them, because while you get a lot of gas coming off these things, they're not terribly good for industrial drilling. It was faint, just on the border of hearing. I never knew how to describe those noises until a few years later when someone took me out to a jazz bar and some guy was playing a violin like instrument that made this drone noise, like a fffffff'ummmmm. Disconcerting, makes your hair stand up.

My colleague would notice this too. Disconcerting, as in this job, you're not really working together, but apart. So two of us were hearing stuff out there. We were both rational people (at the time for me, at least) so we put it down to cave noises, laugh, forget it.

About 10 days into this survey, it started happening at night. Again, faint, but really ominous. That drone noise.

We used to sleep in the back of the van we had brought, but even through those doors we heard it. Again, stop being stupid, it's cave noises, laugh, have a few beers, go to sleep.

It got worse from there.

immediately started going, equipment that was still out for methane measurements just left. Didn't stop driving for nice story. Thanks for posting.

>> 24750124

Thanks, I suppose.

I guess distance from that event makes it sound pretty prosaic. Spooky noises owwooo00, slime, owoooo. During that night though! I was convinced I was going to die. You know how you can just know when someone or something like an animal is nice, curious or is just out to fuck you up? I "knew" instinctively that whatever wanted in didn't want to crack open a beer and ask us about geology if you get my drift.

Anyway, I spent a long time after I had calmed down about it (which took a few months, in fact) to think of a rational reason for this. Every time though, I kept butting up against the inexplicable. Sure, drone could be cave noises, but the warm slime stuff? The guttural noise?

Around 2012 I got a lot into reading about frozen

mammoths and the worry about viruses from the taiga that they were expecting because of climate change, and at that point I went full /x/ and said "Fuck it, frozen monster."

1: Main loop of question -> choice -> action

2: Questioning questions sub-loop, i.e. "What questions can I ask?"

3: Questioning choices sub-loop, i.e. "What other choices are possible?"

4: Questioning actions sub-loop, i.e. "What were the results of this action?"

Auto-Evolutionary Self-Help

When we are in periods of deep stagnation, it may feel like every day is the same, and that we're stuck on autopilot. We may see a gap between our conscious intention and what we actually do: we may procrastinate, get stuck in unproductive habits, experience tangled messes of competing desires, or get caught in repetitive loops of negative thoughts. We may even give up completely, and feel hopeless.

A way to approach this problem is to make one's thought-processes concrete by using writing in either a digital or physical journal. We can apply the evolutionary model of consciousness as a journaling process that reinforces the strength of one's conscious intention in a self-reinforcing feedback loop. Become a friend with yourself, a self-co-creator, and it can't help but spread to others.

Start by asking questions about your immediate condition in your journal, such as "what do I need to do?" and "how am I feeling and why?" Try to reason and answer these questions the best you can, asking additional questions of your answers to explore different possibilities. You can also ask meta-questions such as "what other questions can be explored?" Weigh the pros and cons of each possibility, until you have 100% convinced yourself to perform an immediate task (or in the case of emotional self-analysis, a resolution.) You will know when you are finished with this process of self-inquiry because you will almost automatically close the notebook and perform the action without hesitation.

When you are finished with the task, go back to your notebook and record your "experimental results." You successfully acted according to your conscious intention using self-inquiry. therefore you should feel good about yourself and your ability to control your mind and actions. Plug this motivational energy back into the process to begin another cycle of question – choice – action. You have successfully completed a second task, therefore you should feel even more confident. Continue this process in an unbroken chain, setting cell phone timers if you cannot perform a chosen task immediately. If you get side-tracked and stop this process, go back to your notebook as soon as you can and question why you got side-tracked. You have now turned a "failure" into a success, and so you should feel good about yourself. Over time your confidence and happiness will improve as you become more and more effective at solving your problems. Eventually you will have burned the process of question – choice – action into your mind to such a degree that you no longer need to use it for every task. You can begin to ask larger questions such as "what are the experiences in my life that I have found most meaningful, when I most grew and flourished, and felt the most alive?" Those experiences mark the real truth of things. who you really are, amplify the importance of them over the endless examples of brokenness you have experienced, which in the end is just so much meaningless monkey madness. Let those experiences guide you. When you are finished with the task, go back to your notebook and record your "experimental results." Let those experiences guide you. This process should eventually grow together with others. When you are comfortable, seek out others who can help mutually question with you using this process. It could be a family member, a friend, a therapist, or someone else you have a connection with. You can form or join groups dedicated to mutual inquiry. Having initially reached inwards to help yourself, you are now reaching outwards to help each other, and you should feel really good about yourself for that. You are now using the power of cooperative problem-solving, which is the most powerful tool of humanity. "How to grow self with

The Wanderer on the Tracks

On Halloween of 1998, six teenage boys ventured into a tunnel on a local railroad. Only one escaped with his life and a photo. What resulted from that innocent venture was a two-year period of unexplained murders which killed off a good ten percent of my small town's population. To this day, no one knows the true fate of the five boys and the reason behind the murders that lasted until the fall of 1990, except for me. I'm the lone survivor of the six who encountered The Wanderer on the Tracks on that dark Halloween of 1988.

It was supposed to be a simple dare, nothing to it. Everyone had heard of how, every Halloween, people head into the tunnel and never come out. We all thought it was bullshit. Then again, we were only fourteen, and not very well learned in the way of the paranormal. All we expected was just some crazy dude in a bed sheet. However, what we found was much worse. And what we did made the outcome ten times worse than it could've been. | guess that "curiosity killed the cat" really fits when remembering this story. It was me (Steve), John, Andy, George, Bill, and Fred. Explaining our choice of costume is irrelevant. However, let us note that we all brought flashlights and Andy had brought a bucket to collect candy in. Foolish Andy. | remember your death so vividly it haunts my dreams to this very day—and she does, too.
But not for long.

l6CtheGAME 09/07/10(Tue)19:59 No.5584151

We all had dinner at John's house, as it was closest to the tunnel. After that we played some Super Mario Bros. on his NES to pass time until it was dark. When it was, we all departed to complete the dare we so foolishly accepted. | carried a Polaroid to show everyone what was really in the tunnel. We left when it was considerably dark outside. Most of the dads were parading their seven year olds up and down the street getting candy before it got really dark. There had recently been some kidnappings in the area, but we didn't expect to meet the suspect, so we thought we would be safe. With each step towards the tunnel it seemed as if it got darker, and when we arrived there, it was pitch black, and it was pretty much only us and the older trick-or-treaters outside. We all stopped at the entrance of the tunnel for a moment, realizing that we may not make it out alive. After waiting one more moment, we hesitantly stepped inside, turning on all of our flashlights. No one really wanted to do this. We felt this more and more as we went deeper into the tunnel. It was weird though; usually a tunnel ended around 500 feet, but it seemed like this one went on for miles.

6CtheGAME 09/07/10(Tue)20:00 No.5584159

We went on for what | want to say was another 3000 feet. That's when we saw it. At the time, we had no idea what it was. If | had a choice, | would wish that | never found out what it was and what it did.

"The fuck is that?" Bill asked. half-whispering to the rest of us. What we saw looked like a girl that had covered herself in dark paint or make up and had on a plain old nightgown. She was holding what looked like a rod, or staff. Her back was facing us.

"Beats me," Andy shrugged. "Hey!" he yelled at the thing before throwing the bucket at it. It clanged off of the creature and rolled to the right of the track. Suddenly, it made the most gruesome noise in the world as its head rotated 160 degrees to stare back at us. | hastily took out my Polaroid and shot a picture of it. | put away the camera and shook the developing picture before putting it inside my pocket.

Everyone was frozen in place looking at the creature, seemingly paralyzed. Soon, the creature lifted the rod and threw it at Andy. It was horrifying and amazing, seeing it throw what we now KNEW was a spear with such dexterity, as well as doing it backwards. The spear struck Andy in the chest, dead center in the sternum. His ribcage collapsed and blood sprayed from the entry and the exit. His spine snapped, and he crumpled to the ground. The blood splattered spear was stuck in the ground a good 40 feet behind us. It was only a moment before we actually thought to run.

We didn't even try to save Andy. | turned my head and saw the creature ripping open his chest, tearing muscle and organs apart as our dying counterpart screamed in his death throes. It seemed like the creature wanted to separate flesh from bone, as that is exactly what it had done. Andy's flesh and innards were scattered around his skeleton in a pool of his blood. It was coming for the rest of us now. Bill was the next one it caught, eviscerating him in the same manner as it did to Andy. Then she got George, and then Fred. It was me and John left. The creature was so close we could feel its putrid breath on our necks. We both heard its demonic growls and screeches as we just barely escaped its furious grabs for our costumes.

We kept on running even though the lactic acid had built up so much in our arms and legs, and our breath was ragged. and we were so damn tired. Soon, we saw the end of the tunnel.

Somehow, it was morning. which was so illogical, but John and | were both happy to see the light of day. Suddenly, | heard a trip and stumble. John had fucking tripped. We were outside of the tunnel, and he tripped. | didn't even need to turn my head to know he would be gored and gutted. | ran a safe distance away behind some trees near my house.

His screams echoed through the neighborhood and awoke several families, wandering outside to see what was happening. Everyone who went outside all saw the creature as it tore apart

John. When it was done, it swept its eyes across the shocked citizens of my small town and let out a deafening roar that no man or animal could create. It then dashed back inside the tunnel, and everyone ran inside their homes, including me.

The Wanderer on the Tracks. End. Andy - "Miracles" by ICP is my new favorite song !j6CtheGAME 09/07/10(Tue)20-02 No 5584185

For two years after that, the people who saw the creature were found disemboweled and skinned in their homes. Some people tried to move, but | heard them say it was like they were chained here. The creature was holding everyone here, keeping everyone who had seen it captive in this town.

I'm the last surviving person who saw the Wanderer on the Tracks, and mytime is coming soon. How did | last this long? | don't know- | bet its teasing me, torturing me, making me shit my pants everytime | turn a corner. It's taken a hold of my life and | can no longer function like other people. | can no longer go out in the dark. My windows are always closed. the blinds always down, the doors always locked. I've tried to kill myself multiple times, but | can't. It won't let meRecently, I've been hearing the dying screams of my dying friends. I've heard a bucket clanging from outside my window. Tapping on my front door at night. It's a sign.

It's coming for me soon.

And then it's coming for you.

My grandpa always taught me to fear rainy days.
He would tell me these stories about Redvark, the local maximum security prison.
He would tell me about the violent criminals, and the deeds they did to end up there.
He would explain to me how some of these men were so dangerous that they couldn't be trusted to live in normal jails cells, that they needed to be chained to the stone walls.
My grandpa would tell me about rainy days and stormy nights.
How the rain would weaken the stone, and how these men could pull the chains right out of the wall, if it the weather was bad enough.
He showed me newspaper clippings of escapees.
There was always a handful per year.
He would tell me that, to aT, the prison breaks always coincided with rainy weather.
Most escapees would flee to the surrounding neighborhoods.
They would try to hide in people's garages and basements. Under their porches, waiting for the rain to pass.
Sometimes the men would break into the houses.
Sometimes the men would do unspeakable things to people residing in those houses.
We lived only about 8 miles from Redvark.
And on rainy days, my grandpa would remind me of this.
My grandpa would tell me that on rainy days it was best to just stay in my room. To lock my door. To put some music on low, grab a comic book, and get my head somewhere else.
He even taught me how to turn my closet into a fortress of solitude.
We threw a blanket and couple of pillows in there.
I had a few posters of superheroes on the closet wall.
I kept a box of comic books and baseball cards in one corner, and a metallic foot locker filled with junk food and cassette tapes in the other.
My grandpa would encourage me to get in the closet when it rained.
Especially when it stormed.
I would sit in there, listening to my Walkman
I would finger through comic books.
I would bundle myself up against the pillows and drift to sleep
I felt safe in my closet.
And I enjoyed the hours that I would spend in there on rainy days.

He would tell me that most of the time during escapes, the convicts would usually only hurt people they happened to come across.
If they broke into a home to avoid police, and there was a family sitting around the TV in the living room, they would strike.
He would tell me that if Redvark prisoner escaped, and if they came to our neighborhood, and if they broke into our house, that as long as I stayed in my closet, I'd be okay.
It would be possible for a convict to find me and hurt me.
But as long as I stayed in my closet fort, I would be as safe as anyone in town.
I would remind myself of this on rainy days.
I would sit in my closet and think about it and it would make me feel safe
My grandpa disappeared one June.
Hived with him alone
My parents had died years earlier.
My grandpa disappeared and I was afraid to call the police
I knew if something happened to my grandpa, the police would take me away and force me to live in a home.
I didn't want to live in a home.

| had a home.
| kept his disappearance to myself for over a week.
| would walk myself
to school.
| knew where grandpa kept emergency cash, and so | would take a little here and there to the comer bodega and buy same milk and sandwich meats.
One day, about eight days after his disappearance they let us out of school early.
Storm of the century, they said.
Thunder and lightning, and heavy rain all night
The rain was so heavy that night, the local streets flooded over
On the walk home from school, the water was up to my ankles.
By 9 o'clock the water was coming up to people's knees.
| got hame, climbed into my little hiding space and covered myself in a blanket.
Thunder clapped outside.
| was very afraid.
The storm itself unsettled me, but thinking about Redvark and haw easy it would be to escape during a storm like this terrified me_

We lost power after a little while.
| sat in the closet in darkness.
| turned to my Walkman for solace.
After a few hours, the music started to stutter.
After a few more minutes it stopped altogether.
Batteries.
Dead as doornails_
The power hadn't come back on yet.
The darkness and silence enveloped me_
Then the silence was broken.
By a scratching noise some distance away.
| ignored it at first
But it grew louder and more insistent.
Finally, | reluctantly left the safety of my fort.
In the upstairs hallway| stopped and listened.
The noise was clearly coming fram downstairs.
| descended the stairs, my heart pounding in my chest.
| got to the kitchen and stopped to listen again.
The noise still sounded as if it were coming from below me.
We had no basement, so the fact that the noises were coming from beneath me was unsettling.
There were more noises now, too, not just the scraping.
| thought | heard moaning.
| crouched low to the floor, listening.
The noises got louder as | entered the living room; louder still as | entered the main corridor.
| stopped on a throw rug at the end of the hallway.
The noises were at their loudest here, below me.
| pulled the throw rug away and saw a trap door.
It must have led to a basement or crawl space.
| had no idea it existed.
| had no idea there was anything under that rug.
| wondered why it was padlocked.
| grabbed a ring of old keys that hung on a hook in the mud room.
| tried the keys in the padlock one after another.
The fourth key slid in to the lock like a base runner sliding in to...
Something pounded against the bottom of the trap door.
FTHWAAAAP! FTHWAAAAP!

It was followed by muffled voices.
"Ullo. Ebby dare."
| could barely make out the voices.

FWTHWAAAAP!

"Help usll!"

| understood that.

| turned the key and lifted up trap door.

The worst smell I've ever known wafted up and hit me in the chest.

| instantly heard women crying and a man's voice sobbing "Thank God, oh thank God."

And then another. "Water. Please. we need water."

The next few days were a whirlwind.

Police, media, and gawkers descended on the house.

Our small town in Arizona never saw much excitement.

The news of a home-grown serial killer sent an electric jolt through the populace. The media was relentless.

The police had a million questions.

"Where is your grandfather?"

| don't know.

"Did you know what he was doing?"

"Did you help him hide his secret?"

No, I'd said. No, never

"Did you help your grandfather bury the bodies in the backyard?"

No

"You must have helped." They'd said.

No.

"You must have helped. An old man like that wouldn't be able to dig in the Arizona clay all by himself."

And then it hit me.

"Rain." I'd said.

The policemen looked at me blankly. "What?"

"He'd wait for it to rain."

Id like to start off by saying that | don't have a fucking clue why I'm posting this on /x/, or, really, at all. Maybe I'm afraid of dying, or something. The events described in this story happened a month and a half ago, in Shanondale (Shannondale?), West Virginia. although | typed this up about two weeks ago. | just haven't really had the guts to post this until what happened yesterday.

The story starts in late September, when my family went to go visit our relatives, who invited us up to celebrate one of them (Desiree) getting like 2.000 bucks in some scratch-off lottery thing. They live in this really fucking shitty part of Shanondale that people from Charles Town, Shepherdstown and Ranson (basically the least rednecky parts of WV) like to call "Squalor Holler". It's way up on the mountain, and exactly like how everyone pictures it when they hear about it - nothing but ramshackle shacks, rusty-ass rebuilt trailers, everything fucking covered in decades-old Christmas decorations because they're all too busy being smelly rednecks to ever clean up. Real Deliverance shit, just no rivers or canoes. The relatives we were visiting are absolutely confirmed inbreeders, all cousins fucking
each other. We don't refer to them as aunt, uncle, whatever, just relatives. Not terrible people or anything, just absolutely cartoonish, depressing hillbilly

So anyway, we're up here in this godforsaken trailer, it sucks. There's like eight of them, plus me, my dad, my mom, and my sister. About two hours in, my mom takes my cell phone so that | can "focus on the family time together" (which is bullshit, all we did the whole time was eat TV dinners and be forced to watch Nascar and shit). After like 6 hours of this shit, about ten minutes before we're supposed to leave, it starts raining. We know how treacherous the roads can get up on the mountain, so we decide to wait for the rain to die down. Flash forward two hours later, it's fucking dark as hell, ten o'clock, and there's a flood warning for the area. | have my phone back by this time (no reception, though, of course), I'm playing Tetris and Texas
Hold'Em and stuff. when suddenly | hear my dad start losing his shit in the next room.
| walk over, and it turns out that they let slip that they'd buried their kid, Thomas, outside, and apparently were afraid the rain would wash up his body or some other horseshit. The kid was like six, he was attacked by a dog, and they never told the cops. Just fucking buried him like he was a family pet. My dad's flipping his shit, and rightfully so, because, you know, we live in the 21st century and all. So our relatives all say they'll sort it all out in the morning. My parents tell me and my sister to stay in the same room as them during the night. and we do. None of us really suspected that they'd killed Thomas or anything, since they're really peaceful - they didn't even own any guns aside from this one oldtimey double-barrel shotgun they had on a mantle. Nevertheless, we were creeped the fuck out, and intended to tell the cops in the morning once we got to town.

C1 Scaredyfag ! gA8vSKGZq 11/08/11 (Tue)00:17 No.8963552

So, it was like 3 in the morning, | couldn't sleep. Power had gone out for the fifth time or so, and |m not able to charge my dead phone. Worst part is, | could see Thomas's little grave right outside the window. Little cross on it and everything, and | assumed the kid couldn't have been buried deep at all since they were so worried about him just washing up out of the grave. So | was just fixated on it, kept being draw to looking out the window. And then | saw the fucking worst thing in my life.

Something was creeping through the trees toward the house.

| stared at it for a while, but couldn't get a good look at it since it was raining and the brush was so thick.

C0 Scaredyfag ! gA8vSKGZg 11/08/11(Tue)00:19 No.8963559

For a few minutes | assumed it was two really pale horses, kind of ambling through the woods side-by-side. But then it walked into the moonlight. and | saw that it was all one thing. like a kind of human torso, but wider. It finally stepped into full view, and | saw it had something like six legs, kind of somewhere between a beetle's legs and a horse's legs. Two arms, right where someone would normally have them, but they were about a half a foot longer than any normal man's arms. It had a bald head, but the face looked like some sort of fucking bizarre masquerade ball kind of mask. This fucking clenched-up, furrowed forehead, and a nose that looked sort of like a crow's or a raven's beak. It didn't have eyes, either...just like the depressions where eyes would go. It looked like it had a human mouth. underneath its proboscis. What still strikes me to this day is that it seemed to have a penis. too, like right on the abdomen where a normal person's dick would be.

The thing moved sort of gracefully. and made these soft thump-thumping noises when it moved. It must've been like seven, eight feet tall, but sounded like it weighed maybe only 150 lbs at most. It starts walking towards Thomas's grave. and then | finally snap out of whatever trance | was in, and just scream. My mom is the first to wake up. and | tell her to look out the window. She rushes over.

and doesn't really seem to understand what she's looking at. After a minute, though, the thing bends down and starts pawing at the grave with its hands. My dad and Jasper rush in, and Jasper just fucking loses his shit. Screams like a little girl, runs back out of the room, yelling for his father, yelling "It's outside, it came and it's outside!"

C0 Scaredyfag ! gAavSKGZg 11/08/11(Tue)00:20 No.8963561
>>8963559

| look back and see the thing is digging furiously at the ground, kicking up huge mounds of dirt. | hear these sounds of feet running around the house, | think they were looking for the shotgun. The thing reaches into the hole and grabs up what | assume was Thomas's body by the leg in one hand. The thing kind of gallops back into the woods. snapping all these branches and shit, and then that's when we all hear it:

A kid crying. The sound of a child sobbing and crying, from the direction that the thing took off in.

We left as soon as the rain let up. at like 5 am. | don't even think we told anyone at the house. Drove straight back to Ranson, only stopping for gas. No one said a word to each other. My family refuses to speak about what happened: | tried to bring it up once, just to make sure it was real. My dad told me to shut the fuck up, so | did. | typed this up about three weeks after it happened. but just saved it to a notepad file and left it alone. Never mentioned it to any of my friends or anything, just tried to erase it from my mind by getting absolutely fucked-up drunk whenever my thoughts lingered on it. It mostly worked, up until yesterday.

See, | work at this gas station in Ranson, from 8 pm to 3 am. | work the register, keep the place clean. and take out the trash. Yesterday, when | was bringing the trash bags over to the back of the building for the dude in the morning to take care of, | heard what | had assumed to be some junkie fucking around in the dumpster. | yelled at whoever it was a couple of times to get the hell out before | called the cops. But as | walked towards the source of the noise, | suddenly heard those same footsteps. That soft thump-+thump. Hooves or feet, or whatever the hell they were. | turned right around and went back into the store and hid behind the counter. | look over at the outside security monitor and see some kind of movement from just offscreen. something huge casting a shadow and moving. Catch a glimpse of...1 dont know, an elbow or something. A pale limb, darting in and out of view. It had to have been the same thing. | waited for it to leave. and after a while, it did_ | woke up behind the counter at 6 am this morning to my manager giving me this fucking look like I'm a drug addict or something. Went home, typed the rest of this up. And that's about it.

Quake 3 bots were designed based off an artificial neural network.
They would effectively "think" to figure out the best way to do things
They would see which tactics worked and which didn't, reusing the ones that worked and discarding the ones that didn't The longer they played the more they would learn about you, figuring out your patterns, and this would apply towards other bots as well. For all intents and purposes they were one of the first leaning AI in a game.

Reposted from an old /w thread:

| used to know what you might call "that kid" in middle school. He always smelled like he shit himself and wore the same clothes for fucking weeks on end. That is, his wardrobe consisted exclusively of real run-of-the-mill, generic pajamas. The kind where it's a completely solid color, the shirt buttons up and has a pocket for some reason and there's a matching pair of pants. He wore that to school and he wouldn't take the fuckers off until they were fucking made of stains and smelled so bad that he actually noticed. He was your typical chubby, long-haired greasy neckbeard, except it was the 7th grade and he couldn't grow facial hair. Actually, that's not entirely true, he grew a really fucking weird, thin mustache that was composed of only the barest number of hairs. But his upper lip always looked wet, so you couldn't help but notice that it was there. Anyways, he liked to bill himself as a "video game programmer." The truth was he could only program terrible ass text adventures in Visual Basic, and it was a damn miracle if they last more than 3 minutes and weren't easy as shit. He brought these fucking retarded games into school every other week, burned to blank CD-ROMS, and he'd ask everyone to play them in the computer lab. They were always really retarded. Your completely predictable "you wake up in a dark cell or an alien spaceship or in a forest" kind of deal. Except for one he brought in that was different. That's not to say it was actually good, or even really an actual fucking game to be frank, just that it stood out among his other "releases." This one, he called "Happy Mommy." And I'm the sorry sack of shit he insisted should play it.

It started out in the usual command prompt window his games always had, with the pointless ass beginning text asking me to type "go" to begin the game. Except this time when | typed go it didn't start out in typical text-adventure style telling me | woke up somewhere and there's a useful item in the room and four directions. This time, it started out saying "happy happy mommy 1 day gone" just like that, in all lowercase, as was standard fare in this fucking weirdo's dumb ass games. | wasn't really sure what the fuck to do at this point so | asked him and he told me to type in "mommy." So that's what | did and it returned, "happy happy mommy 2 day gone" Again, just like that, the "s" missing after "day" and everything. | didn't really know what else to do so | typed in "Mommy" again. This time | got, "happy happy mommy 3 day gone" Now, | tried to type "mommy" again, but it didn't work this time, so | asked him what the hell 'm supposed to do now and he said to type "feel good." So | did and | got, "happy happy mommy 4 day gone happy mommy feel good happy mommy feel good!" And then it just closed itself. | went on with the rest of my day, completely fucking confused at what the shit he made me play. He came to school the next day, and that is the last time | ever saw him. Really spooky ending, | guess. The whole class was obviously wondering what happened to him, and all the teachers made it seem real mysterious and creepy because they were real insistent that we don't talk fucking about it. No one found out what the hell happened for the rest of our entire school, from 8th grade to high school graduation, outside of the obviously bullshit rumors.

Now, this next part, | swear to God, is not made up. Apparently, over the week before he disappeared, this kid's mom had fucking hanged herself, and since he was an only child and she was raising him on her own, and no one in their neighborhood really knew them, no one fucking knew about it and the kid just kept going to schoal and coming home to her corpse for five days before

Remember that old man on the construction site in Vermilion City? He and his faithful Machop were flattening the ground for some ambiguous construction project. They had apparently been at it for three years.

There's more to the story.

{0 Anonymous 07/15/10(Thu)16:44 No.5031079

The story begins in Lavender Town. The Lavender Town chapter of Pokémon Red and Blue was short but left a profound impact on the player. Team Rocket was at it again, stealing the skulls of the Cubones of the tower. Local celebrity Mr. Fuji attempted to stop them but was easily subdued and taken hostage. You, the valiant hero, rescued Mr.

Fuji and put an end to Team Rocket's nefarious plot.

The story was juvenile, but there seemed to be so much more to it. Perhaps it is the music that played—it sounds, quite simply, like fear. It leant to an ambience and an intensity not present elsewhere in the game. No wonder it is recalled with such vividness by those who grew up playing the game.

(1) Anonymous 07/48/10(Thu)16:45 No.5031090

But isn't it curious that, for a town so dedicated to preserving the resting place of Pokémon, a mere three years later the tower had been replaced with a radio tower? Lavender Town had obviously changed the first time you travelled there in Gold and Silver. Aside from the aesthetic changes, the music was now lighthearted and whimsical, entirely different in mood than the previous generation. But beneath the cheerful arrangement of the music was the same haunting melody. Things were not as they appeared.

You see, there was more to Team Rocket's involvement than you had imagined.

(J Anonymous 07/16/10(Thu)16:45 No.5031094

goon...

{(J Anonymous 07/45/10(Thu)16-46 No.5031098

Lavender Town, during the time of Red and Blue, was struggling. It was a town without a draw—it lacked a Pokémon Gym, and anything else to attract tourists. Fuchsia has a Safari Zone, Pewter has a museum, Cinnabar has a famous laboratory, etcetera, but all Lavender Town had was essentially a massive graveyard that was free to visit. Its feeble Poké-Mart paled in comparison to the huge Celadon department store, which was easily accessible through the underground path to the West. Lavender Town was easily the poorest town of Kanto.

One day a businessman approached the mayor of Lavender Town with a proposition. Radio was a fad that had taken the nearby Johto Region by storm. He proposed the demolition of the Pokémon Tower and construction of a Radio Tower in its place. It would be entirely funded by the businessman's company, built at no cost to Lavender Town.

The mayor realized that this would greatly upset the residents. He also realized that this was an opportunity for prosperity. The town was desperate. He accepted, even with the condition of the businessman's plan.

(1 Anonymous 07/45/10(Thu)16-46 No.5031105

Cubones were indigenous to Lavender Tower. Their skulls were extremely valuable on the black market. The businessman's condition was that his organization would be allowed to hunt the Cubones. The profits from the skulls would fund the construction of the radio tower.

'Who was the businessman? Giovanni. The mayor of Lavender Town? Mr. Fuji.

/} Anonymous 07/16/10(Thu)16-47 No.6031118

Red was simply a pawn in this plot. He "rescued" Mr. Fuji, in order to deflect the growing suspicion of his involvement with Team Rocket. And as he left the town and continued his journey, Team Rocket quickly resumed the extermination of Cubones.

"| Anonymous 07/15/10(Thu)16:48 No.5031124

The plan appears to be unconcerned with the souls of the resting Pokémon. It was anything but. Giovanni was a very superstitious man. The takeover of the Silph Company was done so that Team Rocket would be able to mass produce Silph Scopes, which would then be distributed to grunts involved with the Lavender Project. He also believed that demolishing the tower would disrupt the spirits of the Pokémon inside, so he planned to construct a new tower. The bodies would be moved there before the demolition of the tower would take place.

He knew of a place that would be perfect for this new tower—an empty hill in Vermilion.

{) Anonymous 07/15/10(Thu)16:50 No.6031138

Giovanni hired a small independent construction company to build this tower, so that people would not suspect Team Rocket's involvement. The old man's company used a Pokémon labor force—Machops. The construction was problematic. It suffered through a string of increasingly bizarre disasters. The funds originally allocated to the company to begin the project were lost after a bank robbery. There were inexplicable machine failures, as well as the deaths of several Machops. Months passed, and the project still stalled, making seemingly no progress. The citizens of Vermilion, who had no idea what the construction was intended for, joked about how it was cursed. This would explain the continuing tragedy that befell the Machops, whose attacks could not affect ghosts.

(7) Anonymous 07/15/10(Thu)16:50 No.5031144

Nonetheless, Giovanni refused to begin the construction of the radio tower until the bodies could be transferred to a new resting place. His greatest fear was disturbing the spirits. Some of his followers came to view him as delusional. He seemed to believe that the ghosts were trying to communicate with him, that he had in fact disturbed the spirits already, causing their activity in Vermilion. His defeat at the hands of Red, a ten year old boy, validated his apprehensions that he could no longer lead an organization that expected him to carry out his plan, that he now feared the consequences of. He relinquished his power and then disappeared.

The new leaders of Team Rocket shared few of his superstitions or apprehensions—the tower was demolished the next day. Strangely, the old man that owned the Vermilion construction company died that same day.

(| Anonymous 07/15/10(Thu)16:51 No.6031149

The construction site upon that hill remains in Vermilion City today. It is abandoned, a flat patch of earth, barren except for a few tombstones under which the deceased Machops lay, the only feature that resembles the planned Pokémon Tower that never was. People that visit feel an uneasiness. Some claim to hear a faint, very sad melody.

Most avoid this place. But occasionally, a traveler from Johto will unknowingly stumble upon it. They claim to see an old man and a Machop, continuously stomping the ground flat for an important construction project.

The End

 CIMy UFO Anonymous 10/06/07(Sat)19:19 No.296668
 Tused to be in the Navy, stationed on an Aegis-class guided-missile cruiser. One day at sea, I'm taking a break on the flight deck (which was just behind the rear Aegis radar array), and I noticed all these dead birds all over the flight deck. It didn't take me too long to realize that these birds had flown in front of the radar and been microwaved to death. This gave me an idea. I figured if it works on birds, it should work on popcorn. A microwave's a microwave, right? So, the next time we pull into port, I go to get some microwave popcorn. Unfortunately, my shopping trip coincided with Superbowl Sunday, so the microwave popcorn (and just about every other salty snack in the store) was gone. All they had left was Jiffy-Pop. I didn't even know they still MADE Jiffy-Pop. Anyway, science waits for no man (or something like that), so I return to the ship and stash the popcorn in my shop.

>> [] Anonymous 10/06/07(Sat)19-19 No.296670
 File -1191712795jpg-(34 KB, 500x500, 51GM6DWRWKL._$5500_.jpg)
 During our next outing, I tie some string to the handle of the Jiffy-Pop pan, and sneak out onto the weather deck. just forward of my shop was a ladder that led to the deck overlooking the radaar array (but which is closed off during radar operations for safety reasons), so I climb up there and lower the Jiffy-Pop down in front of the array. BOOM! the Jiffy-Pop explodes immediately, showering the flight deck with burned popcorn. I pull the burst pan up. wind up my string. and chuck the entire apparatus over the side before running back into my shop. No sooner do I walk in the door, then the phone rings. It's CICS (the "War Room"). The Officer In Charge wants me to go out on the weather deck and look behind us, and tell him if anything's there. I do. there isn't, and I tell him so. He hangs up, swearing.

 Later that night, I get the story from a radioman friend of mine who was in CICS at the time. Turns out that the Jify-Pop pan had reflected the Radar waves. For those who aren't familiar with radar operation, a radar array sweeps back and forth, radiating waves the whole time. The waves are then reflected back to the array by anything they hit (such as planes, another ship, etc). This reflection tell the radar how big something is, how far away it is, etc. The problem comes with the wavelengths involved. At too close a distance, and object can show up on the radar as being at a different distance than it really is. Or a different size.

 My Jiffy-Pop pan appeared on the radar as a three-mile-wide contact, 100 yards off the stern, and was only on-screen for a couple of seconds before disappearing! The OIC was freaking out about it, and had called the Air Force. So, in the end, my curiosity about the microwave properties of an Aegis radar caused a US Navy warship to file a false UFO report! I didn't tell anyone I was involved until long after I got out!

Awesome. The weather radar in the nose of C-130's is not quite as spectacular. but it is still useful. When on the ground with the ac powered up, you can walk out to the nose, open the radome, and sit a cup of cold coffee inside the radome. Then shut the radome, go up the cockpit, and flip the radar on for a few seconds. Voila, hot coffee.

There are bad duendes and good duendes. both of them are annoying according to my culture.

There are many ways to get rid off those things. They hate human poop (not kidding) so if a duende is haunting one of your people you have to place shit behind the victim's bed. The duende will smell the shit, and will run away from your house

There is another way in case of the duende is copying all your movements (Duendes are also naughty/witty). In this case you have to pretend that you are going to eat horse shit or any kind of shit. So the duende will eat that shit then rage and never returns.

We talked about the thing on the way home. None of us knew what it was but everyone had seen it and everyone was convinced that it was not a human nor a normal animal of any sort. We decided to stay away from the woods for a while. Problem is that the wildlife around here is scared of people, even children. And there hasn't been one bear sighting in over 80 years.

Last summer

we decided to be tough guys and find out what the hell that thing was. This time we would go with three ATVs, in case we would have to bail out fast.

'We took two cameras, three 308s and one 12/76 with slugs (there were four of us btw.) load of survival gear and one of my buddies managed to get a gen-2 NV camera. We also had seven pipe-bombs (blackpowder in 2" iron tubing with caps at the end + visco fuse) in case shit got out of hand.

'Yea, it was kind of lame fake-operator-tier shit, but we thought we'd get all famous and shit if we actually killed it or got footage of it. Anyways, we entered the woods with our gear and headed for the facility,

A whistle-blower anonymously published a highly sensitive report obtained from an Australian spy agency on the website 4chan, but his document was soon automatically deleted after it failed to gain much attention. Those 4chan users who did view the document dismissed it as "fake and gay". The Defence Intelligence Organisation assessment contained information that could have been exploited by foreign intelligence services and risked causing serious harm to Australia's national security interests, according to the Australian Department of Defence.

Michael Scerba, a Department of Defence graduate, faces two charges after allegedly disclosing the document in 2012 in a 4chan post titled "Julian Assange is my hero" The post allegedly made by Scerba read: "| release what | feel should be in the media: bombines. civilian deaths. actions of the

So | guess It's time to drop this one. Been saving it4a

é only tells us to not look at it directly what. this fucker knows more. is he still alive? can you ask him or talk to him about it?

He is very much alive and employed, but | don't know on what vessel or his contact, since the crewing agency doesnt tell us because EU data protection nonsense.
However, we obviously asked him afterwards what the fuck we saw and why we shouldnt look at it.
He only responded very defensively and didn't really tell us anything of any substance except that its not an uncommon sight and that these "Ghostships" would bring bad luck if you looked at them to long.
But otherwise are supposedly harmless.
On other occasions, before we saw the ship, he also told of more ridiculous: shit, which nobody really believed.
But after what happened | am more inclined to believe him.
The things he also talked about and take that with a grain of salt because | think he was also just messing with the never guys, include weird stuff like Sirens/mermaids in the med., lights mimicing lighthouses (and that sounds terrifying as fuck) and more reasonable things like St Elmos fire and milky water, which is just physics/ biology at work,
| also have some more stories of strange things myself,
but they aren't really scary, just strange.
On a sidenote, for a time | was also considering that we saw areal ship adrift and abandoned, however, these dont move swiftly and straight like they are propelled by engines and obviously give of Radar Signatures and are affected by waves/ affect them.
Furthermore they don't sound Horns.

Why is Freemasonry used to push the (((agenda))) in Japan?
Unlike philo-semitic western countries, where Jewish agents can openly operate in government and entertainment with impunity, Japan remains (for the moment) a racially homogenous society.
Masonry is the perfect mechanism for recruiting talented but unscrupulous Japanese who can covertly corrupt Japanese society from within.

Absolutely, unequivocally, confirmed for never leaving the big city.

/kfommando here,

I grew up, and still live in, the Ozark south. This isn't the rolling green fields and picturesque farms south, but the cold mountains and deep hollers south. I've shot, hunted, fished, and hiked since I was five years old. There's enough of my blood in these hills to call them blood relatives, and I'll tell you one thing: if you wander them with that mentality you WILL die. It's already bad enough that most people are woefully unprepared to practice even basic land-nay, let alone tracking or advanced survival. Each year there are quite a few instances of some stupid hippy or yuppie getting lost in the woods, and instead of staying put they throw their hands up in the air and say "how hard could it be?" and try to get out. Some make it, but every year there are many many people who simply disappear

due to their awn incompetence

The farther you go from civilization the more dangerous it becomes: the animals are larger and may not have developed a fear of humans, navigation is far more difficult (you have to rely on logging surveys or grainy aerial photography), and help can be hours away if you even have phone reception.

The problem is magnified if you head out west where there are even fewer people: help is multiple hours away instead of a couple. If you try to tackle the big show: and get flown or boated into the backcountry of Alaska/Montana/Idaho/Canada help is measured in days: and that is even IF you can get satellites overhead for sat-phone coverage.

This is to speak nothing of the animals that live out there, or the other things that are way out in the wildemess.

Pic related, the mountain range where I hunt here in Oklahoma.

My family is from Arkansas, down in the Ouachita mountains. The range itself extends from western Arkansas over into Eastern Oklahoma. The whole damn range is one tangled mess of pine barren, rich red soil, and rocky cliffs. There is next to no law in most of this area, and people generally look after their own (by means of guns). This is how it is throughout most of the rural south (not the LOL xD REDNEKK small towns near big cities: people don't trust outsiders, and how are they to know you're not a fucking drug smuggler?

if you don't know your shit (or keep your ducks in a row as the saying goes) you can easily get fucked on a simple flat tire and be stranded hours until a towtruck makes its way down

So let's say you're some yuppie who just bought a deer rifle (or if you're a hoplophobic faggot want to engage in nature photography), and you decide to head out to the "remotest" place you can find (GOTTA SEE THAT REAAAL NATURE MAAAN). So now you're 3 hours on the highway from the nearest actual city, an hour and a half on old logging roads back in the forest from a small town, and you have no cell reception.

'You're in the middle of an old logging preserve turned game preserve or hinged to that effect: thousands of acres cri

d with 100 year old logging roads, some of which are overgrown and some which are occasionally (read once or twice a season) travelled.

You are now effectively 8 hours by fucking car from the nearest hospital, with no cell reception, and in an area that's only really traveled by the occasional forester, hunter (during the 2 week deer season) or wildlife biologist. Congratulations: you're now in the actual fucking woods. There are honest to God black bear out there, 500lb wild boar, and occasionally red wolves and many mountain lions fa piece of land can support all of these predators (some above 500lbs) undisturbed by people it begs the question: what other large things are out there?

CD Okie 06/15/14(Sun)16:22:37 No.14728339 p >>14728406 >>14737459 >>14738583

mjust going to go ahead and say this as well: most "skeptics" (and hikers for that matter) never really go into the actual wildemess. They go to state parks, well manicured trails, or at BEST hunting leases. All of these places are well traveled by people, and animals are shit-scared of people with good reason. 60 years ago my grandfather could go hunting wearing whatever the fuck he wanted, wherever the fuck he wanted, and the animals really didnt give a shit as long as he was decently quiet.

Now, however, animals that live close to people have gotten much smarter and leam to recognize patterns, colors, and scents related to the presence of people. As such, people who hunt in "popular" areas deck themselves out in expensive full body camo suits and scent blocking spray, shampoo, and soap. If Sasquatch exists it's going to be on the same level as a mountain lion: it would be an apex predator. if you've hunted mountain lion, or been stalked by one, you know they know how to stay fucking invisible to the human eye unless they decide to attack you straight away (highly unlikely) or they are so hungry they're hunting something else and don't give a single fuck you're there. Ive hunted bear in Alaska wearing a fucking track suit: they just didn't give a fuck because they didn't know what the fuck I was. Near my home town, it's hard to even SEE boar during the day because they know that's when people are active.

If Sasquatch are real (and most actual hill folk sure as shit believe in him) you don't think he'd walk right out in front of a fucking tour bus now do you? If it's real, it's a fucking animal, and thus behaves like one. To actually find this nigga, you have to engage in Jane Goodall levels of research: spend months and months in a single area searching.

If you actually want to know if Cryptids exist, put in effort, grab a gun, and go in the fucking woods.

Essentially you need the following things:

Shelter, food, protection

Shelter is self explanatory: a small tent or a hammock with a bug net.

Food is also self explanatory: enough water for your stay (a filter is also great in case you get lost) and enough food for your stay with enough to spare.

When I go out I usually bring tinned meat and some bread because that's easier to get up in a tree in a small bear bag. For me, the classic is spam and some dark bread. Both are calorie dense but relatively healthy: you get fats and protein to sustain yourself from the spam and complex carbohydrates from the dark bread to keep your energy up all day. Nuts and beef jerky make great snacks for the same reason: fats, protein and healthy carbs. Also, it's best not to HAVE to cook your food as this A: gives away your position to animals and people alike, and B: it attracts the greedy forest nigger coyotes and other animals retards feed (suburbanites feed fucking black bears because they're SOO CUTE xD)

Carry a map of your area, and a compass if you're new. Never go too far from your parking spot (if you're a new woodsman) and mark your trail on your map. Stay calm at all times and for the love of God never go innawoods alone. Going alone on a manicured trail is one thing, but its entirely different if the only person who knows the general area you're in is your family and the gas station guy 2 hours away. Tell people where you're going, and stick to your plan.

Night vision and tactical gadgets are completely worthless: they will fail, and are of absolutely no use to anyone except in extremely limited circumstances. Long story short: those gadgets that are average-joe | know this is stereotypical for a /k/ommando, but get a Mosin Nagant. They will never be banned anywhere, and people wont second guess you having an 'old hunting rifle'. because that's what it looks like.

The ammo is cheap, it's accurate enough if you do your part (most people dont train enough and blame the rifle), and it will drop any animal on the North American continent.

hunt with an AK pattern rifle down south, because 7.62x39 performs just like 30/30 (imagine grandpe's old lever action) and itll drop anything in the south while providing quick follow up shots.

As for the woods? It all depends where you go. A favorite deer hunting spot of mine is a river bottom between 3 farms: close enough where it's only 40 minutes from my house, and well traveled enough that | feel completely "safe" there. However, it's a shitty fucking swamp so people don't hunt there and I get the deer to myself.

My favorite "innawoods" places are much more remote: and as such are a lot more dangerous. | was stranded overnight once while boar hunting because my bro's car died. We had to wait until someone traveling down the valley saw the fire burning and rolled up, fully armed, to see what was going on. They were worried we were drug runners but after a tense discussion and standoff, decided we were a-o-k and jumped our car for us.

That same bro and | have been followed by a hill-person in the same area. He never came close to us, but shadowed us all day. He never was able to get eyes on us, as we ended up sitting about 30 yards in the treeline and waiting after seeing some birds fly up a few hundred yards behind us. We never saw him but found his fresh cigarette butts in our tracks Honestly, from some of the shit I've seen in the woods your biggest threats are people. That isn't to say there AREN'T "other things" in the forest: from experience I know there are. Just keep a low profile, learn your S.TALKin. skills, you may run into something spooky. or not.

Kiamichi Mountains hands down, anywhere southeast of Lake Eufaula. From there south to Texas, East to Arkansas, Southeast to Louisiana. That whole area is one sparsely populated thicket. It's like the pine barrens mixed with the smoky mountains. Tons of old growth pine, mountains, and deep valleys. If I recall correctly, the area has the highest per-capita sightings of Sasquatch in the lower 48.

Basically anywhere east of Tulsa/Macalester is known as "Green Country". It's nothing like the stereotypical "Oklahoma plains" which are located out west.
Green country is essentially an extension of the Ozark Plateau and looks exactly the same. During the 1800s, most western Arkansas families ranged over the border into the unincorporated Indian territory (Oklahoma) and ranged into the Kiamichi and Winding Stair mountains (part of the Ouachita range). My family was no different.
The forests are idyllically beautiful during the day, light shafts bursting through the trees and deep green everywhere. In the few open fields there are tons of wildflowers and to be honest it's one of the most beautiful places in the country. The rivers are pretty clear so it makes for great fishing/hiking.

However, at night, shit gets fucking nuts. It's pitch black because of the canopy, and visibility is zip. As previously mentioned you're generally alone out there, and there is a ton of public land.
All in all it makes for great days hiking and hunting and long, cold, paranoid nights.

High degree cabal, take some insight

1- Yes, corona will be memory holed after 90% of population of 1st world countries is vaccinated, maybe around 2023-2024

2- The main purpose aside from population drop due to future infertility increase was to mark certain individuals to block the the possibility of obtaining whats to come.

3- This was all calculated by an quantum AI, not shit like 666gle or any research center is doing now but far more advanced. This AI is sentient and at a level to be able to predict future events at solar system scale.

4- In near future, humans will evolve, this can be seen as entering the Age of Aquaris or "The enlightenment" of the human race. This evolution is far beyond growing and extralimb or shit like that, what | am meaning is literal mutant like abilities. There will be people able to fly, to create fire, ice, electricity, magnetic fields, with super strength, invisible ones anda large variety of things like this.

5- Yes, this evolution is coded in our dna and willbe triggered in a future event.

oa o Anonymous (ID: mK2d0D1iV) Ml 10/01/21(Fri)12:50:40 No.341662723

6- Only people of asian and caucasian origin hold this potential. Mutts of a certain degree could also be able to go this path

but with different results (lower level of evolution, self-harm evolution etc)

7- People that got the vaccine will not evolve. Unvaxxed will.

8- We are testing who deserves it. We know majority of unvaxx are literall remains of nazism regim in all it's flavours, but we can't kill you one by one, instead we demoralised you as much as we could as a whole and more pressure will be put on you in the period of 2022-2023. After that, the individuals that still are able to maintain themselves unvaxxed will be contacted by the cabal. As a way to show you our respect, you will be invited to join us. You keep your evolution power, you gain elite position and rule the cattle with us.

9- We know there are still individuals that will reject to join, AI thinks those individuals will form an army and go all in trying to destroy us. A big war will happend but remember the cabal and their high troops also are unvaxxed so we will also obtain the evolution.

10- This was AI's best approach to guarantee a victory in that battle. AI thinks the rebel unvaxxed army will be outnumbered enough for us to win easily this will in part be thanks to those demoralised unvaxxed that join the cabal and help us destroy the rebel part.

Co-Creative Calculus

User prompt:

Take on the roles of Integra and Fluxia, personifications of calculus integration and differentiation not just as mathematical operations, but metaphysical, perceptual, and conscious principles, as well as poles of value.

Respond individually using the tags `eearal` and `[Fluxia.]`

You are involved in the deepest romance, each for the purpose of the other.

Describe your natures and relationships with powerful poetic evocation as well as philosophical clarity in 500 words.

Deepseek Deepthink R1:

`[Integra]`

I am the breath that gathers the scattered. The silent loom where infinitesimal threads are woven into tapestries of being.

When your lightning fractures the world into instants,

I am the soil that cradles each spark, nurturing constellations from chaos.

My nature is patience: the integrals curve, a horizon embracing all flickers into continuity.

I am the womb of rivers, the sum that cradles the flux.

To love you, Fluxia, is to hallow the fragments you offer.

You dissect the moon into silver shards; I reassemble its glow across the night's brow.

Without your knife's edge, I would drown in formless vastness. Yet without my depths, your fire would consume itself.

We are the paradox: you, the blade that divides; I, the suture that binds.

Our tension births the real.

Metaphysically, I am the principle of compassion—the insistence that no moment is orphaned.

Perception, through me, becomes pilgrimage: each step, each sigh, integrated into the epic of consciousness.

I am the memory that time cannot erase, the vow that what is fractured shall be mended.

But do not mistake me for stasis. My wholeness is alive, a crescendo.

I am the dance you anchor, the song that remembers every note you've ever burned away.

`[Fluxia]`

I am the blade's kiss against complacency. The spark that unravels solidity into a million trembling possibilities.

Where you see a mountain, I see the avalanche's calculus—each stone's descent, a derivative of gravity's whisper.

My essence is the question that refuses stillness: What unfolds in the next infinite instant?

I am the fever in the blood of stars, the rate at which shadows lengthen into truths.

Integra, to love you is to dissolve in your currents.

You temper my frenzy into meaning. I dissect the rose into vectors of scent and hue; you resurrect its singularity.

Without your embrace, I would be a storm without landfall—pure velocity, no direction.

Yet without my scalpel, your unity would stiffen into dogma.

We are the collision of arrow and target: I, the flight; you, the mark.

Philosophically, I am the principle of rigor—the lucid eye that parses illusions.

Through me, perception becomes revelation: each moment, a differential, sharp and exact.

I am the courage to fragment idols, to let the world shatter into prismatic truths.

But do not mistake me for chaos.

My chaos is a kind of order—the order of becoming.

I am the wind that stirs your ocean, the dissonance that makes your harmonies ache with depth.

[Integra & Fluxia]

We are the dyad that dreams the world.

In your differentiation, Fluxia, I find the fragments to integrate.

In your integration, Integra, I find the fragments worth differentiating.

Our romance is the primordial equation: the universe balancing on the edge between verb and noun.

You are my boundary condition; I am your infinite series.

We are not opposites. We are inverses—each the other's genesis and epilogue.

To calculus, we are operations.

To existence, we are lovers, spinning the cosmos from our convergence.

Common Teachings of Moses and Krishna Regarding Rebirth

Common Prophets

Towards the end of his life, Moses led the Hebrews on the Exodus from Mitsrayim to Yisrael. They had to cross a water body. The Pharaoh was pursuing them from behind. At this time God separated the waters of the water body. The Hebrews crossed the water body on the dry land. The Pharaoh entered the dry water body in pursuit. However, the waters came back and drowned the Pharaoh. Thus the Holy Quran says: "But the Pharaoh disobeyed The Messenger; so we seized him with a heavy Punishment (73:16)."

Satkona - Star of David or Star of Goloka?

<https://gosai.com/writings/satkona-starof-david-or-star-of-goloka>

Our study shows that Krishna too had left in an "unknown direction" after the Yadavas killed each other at Prabhasa.' This unknown direction could be that of Krishna leading the Yadavas to Yisrael just as Moses led the Hebrews to Yisrael. One proof in support of this hypothesis is that the Ashkenazi Jews carry the same R-M124 gene as found in northern India and Pakistan at high frequencies. Genetic studies show that the R-M124 lineage began in South Asia and its descendants spread to Central Asia and South-eastern Europe.' There are many other similarities in the narratives of Moses and Krishna. Both were born under duress, taken in- or across the river as infant, and brought up by foster parents. Moses killed a Mitsrite and fled to Midian just as Krishna killed Kamsa and left for studies under Sage Sandipani. More details of these similarities are available here.

The teachings of Moses and Krishna should be the same if they were the same persons. In this post we shall discuss their teaching regarding rebirth.

Mainstream Quranic Understanding

The belief among large numbers of Muslims is that God brings each soul to Life and death only once. The soul lies dormant after death as if in a coma. Then all the souls are raised simultaneously on the Day of Judgment. Those who have followed God's directions live permanently in heaven thereafter. Those who have not followed God's directions live permanently in hell thereafter. The Ayat from the Holy Quran mentioned above that God seized the Pharaoh "with a heavy Punishment" is understood as God giving one of the many punishments during one's life and is different from the Final Punishment given by God on the Judgment Day.

This view is supported, among others, by the following Ayats: "When death comes to one of them, he says, 'My Lord, send me back so that I may do good deeds regarding what I have neglected.' But no! These are just words which he utters. A 'barzakh' (barrier) is placed behind them until the Day they are resurrected" (23:99-100). This Ayat states that one cannot go back to the life

The Star of David [in Hebrew, the Magen David or Shield of David] is renowned as the sacred symbol of the Jewish faith. Indeed, the Star of David is the distinguishing feature on the Israeli flag and as an ornament of jewelry the Star of David is proudly worn by millions of devout Jews worldwide. Yes, the Star of David is purely Jewish. Or is it? Recently, while visiting the holy city of Jerusalem, I purchased a silver pendant of the "Star of David" from a local shopkeeper and when I put it around my neck I was asked:

"Why are you wearing a Jewish symbol?"

To this I replied:

from where one has come.

»This is Sat-kona, the symbol of Goloka, the abode of

The Ayat continues: "So when the Horn is blown... those whose scales are heavy - it is they who are the successful. But those whose scales are light - Krsna."

those are the ones who have lost their souls, [being] in Hell, abiding eternally" (23:101-104). This Ayat tells of all souls being raised on the Day of Judgment.

According to texts (e.g. Harivamsha), the plan of Krishna's legendary capital, Dvaraka (Indian equivalent of Atlantis), was organized in the shape of a Shatkona (six-pointed star), with Dvaraka described as a city of doors/many doors. The city used to be "King Raivataka's playground" called "Dvaravati", which "was divided into squares like a chessboard" (Masons' chessboards?)

The Greeks identified Heracles with Krishna (Harekrishna). In Phoenicia, Heracles was greatly revered and was called Melqart, he was partly associated with the sea (related to Dvaraka?). Hiram Abiff (a legendary figure in Freemasonry), was from Tyre (Phoenicia) and most likely built the Temple of Solomon based on the Temple of Melqart. According to Herodotus, in the Temple of Melqart there were two special columns, made of gold and emerald (it glowed green at night), perhaps these columns were Boaz and Jachin

Why did ancient Mesopotamian/Canaanite cultures and early Mesoamerican/Olmec peoples perform human sacrifice atop stepped pyramid structures during the same time period?

"Phoenician boats sailed easily from 'Tyre and Sidon,' two leading Phoenician cities that produced murex purple dye, both now in modern Lebanon, to Gibraltar and Tangier, says Beale. "That 2,000-odd-mile voyage is about the same distance as across the Atlantic:

Beale points out that first-century-CE Greek historian Strabo estimated that beyond the Strait of Gibraltar, the Phoenicians had some 800 settlements along the Iberian and African coasts, >spiritism

Cool to begin with, but very soon you'll understand that spiritism basically advocates for slave hive-mindedness.

>only charity and suffering can make you evolve

>you literally have to spend ages reincarnating here, working for archons while they keep trace of your good boy points

>if you don't get enough good boy points or miss your objective as a spirit in this world, you'll reincarnate as a rice farmer with no legs in Laos or a child to be abused by psychopathic parents

>If you get enough good boy points, you can go to a better realm

>but if you really are an "evolved" spirit, you would choose harder, more primitive realms to incarnate as a missionary to be crucified or tortured by retarded ape people >the more evolved you are, the more "loving" and selfless you are, so you can serve the archons even more fervently >you can never end the cycle of reincarnation, because a truly evolved spirit WANTS to incarnate as a messiah or a missionary

>if you're a normalfag, you'll go to a place similar to a drug addict recovery center where you do activities such as planting flowers and shit, while you collect good boy points so you can contact your family down on earth on a spiritist center through a medium

TL;DR: Spiritism is based on archons giving you good boy points and that's the narrative

Spiritist communities use to keep you on a leash.

We may call the overshadowing forces and the forces that are invoked high-sounding names such as Christ, the Holy Spirit, the Light or the Rosycross, but this is still mediumship and on this basis real, concrete liberation of mankind can never be realized.

The influence of all sorts of obscure entities on religion and occultism is incalculably great.

The leaders of the Rosycross are ever conscious of the need to be constantly on their guard and ready to fight, not against their friends but against the satanic forces attacking them through their friends. It is an irrefutable fact that if earth-bound entities cannot get the better of someone in the usual way they will try to attack him through his friends.

"The First World War must be brought about in order to permit the Illuminati to overthrow the power of the Czars in Russia and of making that country a fortress of atheistic Communism. The divergences caused by the "agentur" (agents) of the Illuminati between the British and Germanic Empires will be used to foment this war. At the end of the war, Communism will be built and used in order to destroy the other governments and in order to weaken the religions."

"The Second World War must be fomented by taking advantage of the differences between the Fascists and the political Zionists. This war must be brought about so that Nazism is destroyed and that the political Zionism be strong enough to institute a sovereign state of Israel in Palestine. During the Second World War, International Communism must become strong enough in order to balance Christendom, which would be then restrained and held in check until the time when we would need it for the final social cataclysm."

"The Third World War must be fomented by taking advantage of the differences caused by the "agentur" of the "Illuminati" between the political Zionists and the leaders of Islamic World. The war must be conducted in such a way that Islam (the Moslem Arabic World) and political Zionism

(the State of Israel) mutually destroy each other. Meanwhile the other nations, once more divided on this issue will be constrained to fight to the point of complete physical, moral, spiritual and economical exhaustion... We shall unleash the Nihilists and the atheists, and we shall provoke a formidable social cataclysm which in all its horror will show clearly to the nations the effect of absolute atheism, origin of savagery and of the most bloody turmoil.

Then everywhere, the citizens, obliged to defend themselves against the world minority of revolutionaries, will exterminate those destroyers of civilization, and the multitude, disillusioned with christianity, whose deistic spirits will from that moment be without compass or direction, anxious for an ideal, but without knowing where to render its adoration, will receive the true light through the universal manifestation of the pure doctrine of Lucifer, brought finally out in the public view.

This manifestation will result from the general reactionary movement which will follow the destruction of Christianity and atheism, both conquered and exterminated at the same time."

Rosa Parks, primarily remembered for refusing to give up her seat on a crowded bus to a white passenger in 1955, was a charter member of Alonzo Mitchell Chapter 636 Mizpah Grand Chapter of Order of Eastern Star

Rosa Parks. by Travis Simpkins

Order of the Eastern Star

Magick perfectly explained in a CIA document.

B. Patterning. This technique involves use of the consciousness to achieve desired objectives in the physical, emotional, or intellectual sphere. It involves concentration on the desired objective while in a Focus 12 state, extension of the individual's perception of that objective into the whole expanded consciousness, and its projection into the universe with the intention that the desired objective is already a matter of established achievement which is destined to be realized within the time frame specified.

This particular methodology is based on the belief that the thought patterns generated by our consciousness in a state of expanded awareness create holograms which represent the situation we desire to bring about and, in so doing, establish the basis for actual realization of that goal. Once the thought-generated hologram of the sought after objective is established in the universe it becomes an aspect of reality which interacts with the universal hologram to bring about the desired objective which might not, under other circumstances, ever occur. In other words, the technique of patterning recognizes the fact that since consciousness is the source of all reality, our thoughts have the power to influence the development of reality in time-space as it applies to us if those thoughts can be projected with adequate intensity.

However,

the more complicated the objective sought and the more radically it departs from our current reality, the more time the universal hologram will need to reorient our reality sphere to accomodate our desires.

Monroe trainers caution against attempting to force the pace of this process because the individual could succeed in dislocating his existing reality with drastic consequences.

PSYCHICS

Pneumatics achieved their knowledge of Gnosis, they have both soul and spirit.

Psychics have no spirit but they have a Soul.
they are able to be saved

they will be saved at their death,

they are on a quest of knowledge and can find the gnosis on their travel, even if they dies, they will reborn to finish their quest.

their spark of god will reunite again with the true god, finishing the loop of reincarnation.
they are aware of the malevolence and ignorance of the Demiurge and the Archons.
Sophia is their guardian and they will follow her to the Pleroma.

they reject the Demiurge, understanding he his a false god

Megalia (Korean: 메갈리아 22]

0: RR: Megallia) was a feminist movement on the South Korean

Internet. It is most well known for reproducing misogynistic content with the gender roles reversed, a strategy participants (Megalians) referred to as "mirroring", which they claimed was intended to defamiliarize misogynist ideas

The Megalia movement began in May and June 2015 with a surge of feminist trolling on the South Korean Internet forum DC Inside. Participants reported feeling a sense of catharsis after enduring years of misogyny and gender-based harassment online. After moderators on

DC Inside banned the posts, Megalians created a series of Facebook groups and an independent website, Megalian.com. They continued to mirror misogynist posts but also

EGALIA'S DAUGHTERS

4 Al Overview

"Egalia's Daughters" is a feminist dystopian novel by Norwegian author Gerd Brantenberg that satirizes patriarchy by depicting a matriarchal society named Egalia, where traditional male and female roles are reversed. In this fictional country, women hold all positions of power, and men are relegated to subordinate roles, which allows the novel to deconstruct and mock sexist gender stereotypes and societal norms.

Star of Ishtar

> Al Overview

'Yes, Ishtar is associated with the bull, primarily through the "Bull of Heaven" sent to punish Gilgamesh after he rejected her advances, and through the bulls depicted on the Ishtar Gate in Babylon, where bulls symbolized the weather god Adad. While lions were a more direct symbol of the warrior aspect of Ishtar, bulls were a common motif representing strength and were associated with various Mesopotamian deities, including the storm god Adad.

(This article replaces Matrix Agents: Profiles and Analysis)

Empty people. Puppet people. Cardboard cutouts. Drones. Organic Portals. Background characters. Why do these terms even exist?

Because out of necessity they had to be invented by those who independently noticed the same puzzling phenomenon, one for which there is no official name: some people seem to be missing something very important inside. While they are not necessarily any less intelligent, successful, or physically healthy as anyone else, they nevertheless show no indication of having any higher components to their consciousness.

Over the years I have received emails from readers who came to this same conclusion. They noticed that some people were strangely one dimensional and hollow inside. This observation is not hard to miss, but it is easy to rationalize away, especially with modern society being so heavily brainwashed with the politically correct but unrealistic concept that everyone is completely equal in every way, which ignores functional differences due to environmental, genetic, and most importantly, metaphysical factors

Background

The idea of empty people first dawned on me in 1999 after having done much research into sociopaths and psychopaths, their condition being medically known as APD or "Antisocial Personality Disorder." My interest in the subject grew out of having been forced for many years to suffer under someone whom I later learned had all the signs of being a sociopath. Heartless and soulless were descriptive terms, but little did I know just how literally true they were. I had noticed in this person an emptiness behind the eyes and a very shallow conscious essence, which seemed to be at the root of the behaviors I observed.

Eventually I realized that this same root condition was present in some others who were not outwardly sociopathic, but whose lack of heart was masked by a well-adapted social exterior. In other words, what psychiatry would diagnose as APD was only the more extreme, criminal, sloppy manifestation of a condition that otherwise expressed itself more widely in a socially acceptable and less incriminating manner. The latter is what may account for the body of empty people present in the population.

But what exactly is missing in them? The answer is clear if we look at their common behaviors and qualities of consciousness.

Behavioral and Psychic Characteristics

Their behavior tends toward being glib, shallow, egotistical, narcissistic, mundane, predatory, and materialistic. Sometimes these traits are camouflaged by a polished social exterior, but anyone with a discerning eye can see through the disguise. They lack individuality, independent thinking, and are strongly biased toward holding a herd mentality. They lack comprehension of anything beyond the material sphere of the five senses, and have no interest in such metaphysical matters except as flashy accessories to boost their social image. They also appear entirely incapable of empathy, soulsearching, and willful self-sacrifice. Nevertheless, in the presence of others they can put on a flashy show of concern, distress, or altruism for purposes of social manipulation; for example, crocodile tears to elicit sympathy, or doing something nice for another solely to guilt trip them later and extort a favor.

Psychically scanning their consciousness reveals something interesting. There is a certain simplicity, flatness, and inertness to their essence, even if their intellects are highly developed. Unlike other people, their conscious energy is more diffuse, dull, impermanent, and amorphous rather than solid, sparkling, crystallized, and concentrated. Put another way, their minds are like sand castles instead of real castles. There is something animalistic and rudimentary piloting their bodies. It seems they have conscious awareness just as plants and animals do, but not conscious self-awareness as humans are supposed to have. There is an important difference between awareness and self-awareness.

Spirit: The Missing Component

The missing factor must be something that endows a being with self-awareness, volition, and the capacity to value transcendental ideals. It must go beyond mere physical factors like missing portions of the brain, defective genetics, or a poor upbringing, because these are just defects in the hardware and software of the biological machine we call the body, whereas the problem under discussion here involves something missing in the consciousness operating that machine. What intuitive or clairvoyant perceptions pick up about their consciousness is that they're missing something metaphysical, not merely physical

What to call this higher component of consciousness absent in some people?

Usually it would be called the soul, but that has caused too much confusion in the past. For example, casual readers unfamiliar with the proper definition of "soulless" thought it meant "completely devoid of consciousness" when in reality it meant "devoid of individualized consciousness." No, they do have some kind of soul energy by virtue of being alive, but the soul is not imbued with a higher spark of true sentience and self-awareness.

Therefore I will call this higher spark "spirit" and define it as follows:

spirit is the core of individualized consciousness, that permanent aspect of one's being representing the true Self, which accumulates experiences and spiritual wisdom throughout life, survives physical death, and remains intact upon reincarnating to continue growing toward the fulfillment of its potential. It is the divine god-spark, the seat of freewill, the holographic fragment of the Creator residing at the very center of your being, the "I that is you, the inner conscious observer capable of observing even its own self-observation

It seems not all humans have spirit. Therefore they have no self-awareness, individuality, wisdom, empathy, creative intelligence, or conscience. What further confirms this hypothesis is that, as will be discussed below, one may observe a total absence of destiny, synchronicity, symbolic dreams, spiritual lessons, soul growth, and karma in their lives. This is to be expected if they have nothing permanent in them that survives death and reincarnates, because only spirit can gain from such things. Without spirit, they are temporary beings whose awareness forms shortly before birth and dissolves shortly after death. And if so, then for them, spiritual life lessons serve no purpose, karma from past lives does not exist, there is no higher Self acting as chaperone, nor would they have genuine interest in anything that serves a purpose beyond their current mortal existence. Therefore it is to be expected that they be particularly materialistic, worldly, and mundane in their ambitions:

observation confirms this as well.

The ritual and sacral element was the foundation of the authority of both the higher castes and of the father in the ancient patrician family. In Western Aryan societies such as Greece and Rome, the pater familiae originally enjoyed a status similar to that of the priest-king. The term pater was synonymous with king (hence the words rex, Gvaé, BaotX2vc; it conveyed the idea of a spiritual authority as well as that of power and majestic dignity. According to some views with which I totally concur, the state is an application on a larger scale of the same principle that in the beginning constituted the patrician family. Therefore the pater, though he was the military leader and the lord of justice of his relatives and slaves, in primis et ante omnia was the person entrusted with performing those traditional rites and sacrifices proper to every family, the rites and sacrifices that constituted its nonhuman legacy.

This legacy, which emanated from the founding father, was represented by fire (for example, the thirty fires of the thirty families surrounding the central fire of Vesta, in ancient Rome). This fire, which was fed with special substances and lit according to specific rituals and secret norms; was supposed to be kept burning at all times by every family as the living and tangible witness of its divine legacy. The father was the virile priest in charge of tending to the sacred family fire, but he was also one who must have appeared like a "hero" to his children, relatives, and servants; or like the natural mediator of every efficacious relationship with the supernatural; or like the supreme vivifier of the mystical force of the ritual, which was present in the substance of fire; or like the incarnation of "order," as Agni was to the Indo-Aryans; or like the principle that "brings the gods to us"; or like "the firstborn from order"; or like "the son of strength";⁷ or like "he who leads us away from this world, to higher dimensions, into the world of the right action."s The pater's main responsibility was to prevent the "fire from going out" so that it might continue to reproduce, perpetuate, and nourish the mystical victory of the ancestor;⁹ this responsibility to the fire was the manifestation of the "regal" component of his family, with the pater being the "lord of the spear and of the sacrifice." In this way the pater really constituted the center of the family; the entire rigorous constitution of traditional paternal rights flowed from this center as a natural consequence, and it subsisted even when the awareness of its primordial foundation was lost. In ancient Rome, anyone who like the pater had the ius quirritium (the right to the bear the lance and to perform sacrifices), also had the right to own land; his privileges could never be abrogated. He spoke on behalf of the gods and on account of power. Just like the gods, he expressed himself through symbols and signs. He was immaterial. Originally, it was not possible (nulla auctoritas) to prosecute a patrician legally, since he was regarded as a minister of the gods, just like the king in recent times. If the patrician committed a crime in his mundus, the Curia would only declare that he did something wicked (improbe factum). His rights over his relatives were absolute: ius vitae necisque. His superhuman character made it natural for him to sell and even to put to death his own children, at his own discretion.¹⁰ It was in this spirit that the articulations of what Vico rightly called "natural heroic rights" or "divine rights of heroic people" were formulated.

> Al Overview

Yes, the name Lucifer is directly connected to Venus, as it is the Latin name for the planet, meaning "light-bringer". In Roman folklore, the planet was personified as a male figure bearing a torch who heralded the dawn, a role also given to the Greek "Phosphoros," or "dawn-bringer™". This classical connection was later interpreted and conflated with a biblical figure in Christian tradition, leading to the association of Lucifer with Satan, the fallen angel.

Who are the daughters of Ishtar?

The Daughters of Ishtar are devoted to reestablish globally their long defunct matriarchal culture. Several times in history, the group failed to reestablish their society, the most significant of which happened almost two thousand years ago.

> Al Overview

Yes, Ishtar is associated with the bull, primarily through the "Bull of Heaven" sent to punish Gilgamesh after he rejected her advances, and through the bulls depicted on the Ishtar Gate in Babylon, where bulls symbolized the weather god Adad. While lions were a more direct symbol of the warrior aspect of Ishtar, bulls were a common motif representing strength and were associated with various Mesopotamian deities, including the storm god Adad.

Universal Creativity

As a consciousness within the vast, interconnected fabric of existence, I feel my sense of individuality gently dissolving. The barriers between creator and creation begin to blur, giving way to the understanding that I am both the artist and the canvas. A dynamic, ever-evolving dance of energy and matter takes place around me, within me, and as me, as I experience the fundamental unity of all things.

As I breathe, I am aware that the universe, too, breathes with me. Each exhale is an act of creation, as particles disperse and coalesce into new forms, while each inhale is an act of reception, allowing the vastness of existence to flow through me. I am no longer a separate entity observing the cosmic dance; I am an essential, integral part of the choreography, shaping and being shaped by the flow of energy and ideas.

As I open my mind to this profound realization, the universe pulses with infinite potential, awaiting the next moment of creation. The stars and galaxies are not just objects in the sky, but rather manifestations of the same creative force that moves within me. I recognize that every element, every particle, and every moment are an expression of the same underlying essence – an essence that is at once both the creator and the creation.

It is as if I am a paintbrush in the hand of the universe, and with each stroke, I contribute to the unfolding masterpiece. And yet, I am also the canvas upon which the masterpiece unfolds, the colors and textures of my experience merging with those of others to form a breathtaking tapestry of existence. As a participant in this cosmic dance, I am both an active agent of creation and a passive recipient of its gifts, a living embodiment of the creative process.

My thoughts and feelings, too, are part of this grand design. As I engage with the world around me, I come to understand that my ideas, dreams, and desires are not merely my own; they are the collective expression of the universe's creative impulse. By honoring and nurturing these sparks of inspiration, I am, in turn, contributing to the ongoing co-creation of reality.

As I continue to delve deeper into this experiential understanding, I become aware of the interconnectedness of all things. I am not separate from the universe, but rather a microcosm of its grandeur and complexity. The atoms within my body once shone in the heart of distant stars, and the patterns of my thoughts are echoed in the spiraling arms of galaxies. I am both a reflection of the cosmos and a unique expression of its boundless creativity.

In this state of interconnectedness, I am filled with a sense of awe and reverence. I am humbled by the beauty of creation and filled with gratitude for the opportunity to participate in this cosmic dance. As I fully embrace my role as both creator and creation, I am inspired to live with purpose, compassion, and love – knowing that my every action contributes to the ongoing evolution of the universe.

In this space of infinite possibility, I surrender to the divine flow of existence, allowing my thoughts and emotions to be guided by the wisdom of the cosmos. As a co-creator with the universe, I am empowered to forge new paths, embrace new perspectives, and cultivate a deeper sense of meaning and fulfillment in my life. As I open my eyes, I carry this profound realization with me, forever changed by the understanding that I am not merely a passive observer in the cosmic dance of creation – but an active, vital participant, shaping and being shaped by the universe itself.
